

Jarkey Returns To 24 Karat

Harry Jarkey, one of the zaniest comedians ever to appear in Detroit, returns to the 24 Karat Club, 16890 Telegraph, for a three weeks engagement starting Monday, July 7.

Jarkey will be making his seventh appearance at the club in two years. His use of guitar, trumpet and trombone with comedy songs has made him a popular entertainer.

Jarkey will share the spotlight with Jona Carroll, singing star, who will open a four weeks engagement at the same time.

"CURTAIN GOING UP"

By WALLY ROBERTS

Thousands of performances in the theater are rare events. The closing down of a long run production usually calls for a jubilation of a bash, a splendid party.

"My Fair Lady," lasting seven years on the Broadway musical stage, celebrated its final curtain call with an on-stage party that completely inundated "that plain in Spain" with bubbly champagne.

"Life With Father," another seven-year champion on Broadway, had a more staid ringing down of the curtain: producer Leland Hayward choked back tears as he personally thanked each member of the cast.

OLD WALLY will neither have a party for all his readers nor will he be at this final column, with salty tears. No, the curtain is going to come down after 14 years on the Observer amusement page-stage in a most undramatic, even prosaic, fashion.

Our parting, since it will be in the sweet sorrow category, shall be faced ever so faintly with slight traces of nostalgia. Slight traces since it would take hundreds of pages to cover all the wonderful memories.
