If You Want to Drive a New Ford ORDER NOW

Hard, Cold Facts

unless orders are placed RIGHT NOW there will be much delay and disappointment for many who think they can get their cars later on. The big season for buying cars is near at hand, and the Ford Motor Co. faces it with over 100,000 cars being ordered. Deliveries are being made—but to those dealers only who submit SIGNED orders from buyers.

We would readily take immediate delivery of 50 or 75 cars, to hold, thus helping to meet the local shortage sure to arise in a few weeks, but our signature won't be recognized by the Ford Co.—ORDERS MUST BE SIGNED BY PURCHASES. Our estimate of 50 or 75 cars will be needed in the next few weeks by us, and we WANT that number DELIVERED—WE WANT TO MEET THE DEMAND WE'RE ANXIOUS FOR YOU TO GET YOUR FORD WHEN YOU WANT IT, and we LOSE TO YOU, MR. PROSPECTIVE PURCHASER, TO HELP MEET THE SITUATION—YOU CAN BY placing your order NOW.

As soon as it is received we place each order on file with Ford Motor Co., and YOU WILL BE PROTECTED ON DELIVERY IN APRIL, MAY, JUNE OR JULY.

EGGS AND BUTTER.

It is said that eggs and butter will reach the dollar mark next winter. Speculators are at present placing orders, according to reports, for great quantities of "henfruit" and butter, to be delivered next fall, to be placed in storage, when the supply is plentiful. The producer will not, of course, benefit by the high prices. In an editorial the Detroit Courier comments on the proposition as follows:

"Now is there any way to prevent this kind of gambling in the food supplies of the nation? It is such unscrupulous operations of the middlemen that is today doing untold injury to this entire country. The officials report that there is no law whereby such good gambling can be stopped, or the operators punished. The lawmakers of this country have an important duty to perform. The matter of supply and demand, cost of production or legitimate profits will have nothing to do with the price, provided they have their way. They simply aim to secure control of the market, set a selling price and make a few million dollars. Should half of the butter and eggs they buy spoil while in storage, the profits would remain just the same, and so confident are the operators of success that they are now tipping off the prices to be expected—dollar per dozen and pound."

Representative A. B. Glaspie has a bill to be introduced in the state legislature giving a man one-third of his wife's estate at her death, making the husband a sharer in his wife's property as well as the wife in the husband's property. Under the present law a woman is entitled to one-third of her husband's estate, whereas the wife may die and leave all her money to her children, and the husband cannot claim his share. In order to prevent selfish children from keeping all of their mother's estate to themselves and leaving the aged father to become a county charge, Glaspie proposes to change the present law so that a husband will receive one-third of his wife's estate upon her death.

Royal Oak surprised the remainder of the county last week by proposing to break away from Oakland county and annex that village to the city of Detroit. The proposal is receiving much attention from the county officials. Just what benefit the proposed annexation will be to the Oakland village, how it can be put through, and whether the remainder of the county would have a say in the matter, is a question. An extension of Wayne county into Oakland will probably be opposed by our people, if they have any voice in the matter.

Thomas W. Nadal, professor, dean and acting president of Olivet college, is a candidate for member of the State Board of Education to succeed himself. Dear Nadal is one of the foremost educators of the state, and has creditably served one term on the board.

Mr. and Mrs. El. Simmons were Detroit business callers last Tuesday.

Harry Simmoms, who works at the Studebaker Auto Works, visited his sister, Mrs. Wm. Green, Saturday night and Sunday.

One morning last week when Mr. Graham returned to the house from the barn, after milking, he found the sitting room in flames, which had started from an over-heated stove. The rest of the family were not up yet, so had not noticed it. Mr. Graham at once notified Farmington Central to call the neighbors, while he was trying to put it out, and Central said she would, but no telephone calls were sent in, so no neighbors appeared, but the family, after much hard work, succeeded in getting the fire out. We are glad to know we have such a nice "helpful" Central in cases of emergency.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Beyer, of Plymouth; Mr. and Charles Beyer of Pennville; Mr. and Mrs. Will Garchaw, of Livonia; Fred Garchaw and two sons, Howard and Harry; Walter and Arthur Helm and Levi Pankow were callers at Riley Wilforn's last Sunday.

A posse card shower was tendered Mrs. R. D. Wolfrom, on the occasion of her recent birthday. Mrs. Wolfrom received some 70 cards, and wishes to express her sincere thanks for the kindly remembrances of her friends and neighbors.

ABSOLUTE ZERO.

The Supposed Point at Which Heat Ceases to Exist.

Absolute zero, a term often used in scientific articles, means the point at which no heat exists. "Hot and cold," writes Rogers D. Rush in the Electrical Experimenter, "are relative terms. Ice may be warm when compared with frozen mercury at 40 degrees C., for in reality hot and cold are only varying degrees of warmth, and a body absolutely cold would be one from which all heat was absent. Its temperature then would be at absolute zero."

Absolute zero is assumed to be at -273 degrees C. This point has never been actually reached, but Kamringen, Onnes of Leyden has come nearer it than any other investigator.

He did this by liquefying gases. Some gases can be liquefied by simple pressure, others cannot be liquefied by pressure until they have been cooled below a certain point, this point being known as critical gas as its critical temperature. Methane gas must be cooled below 82 degrees C., nitrogen below 146 degrees C., hydrogen below 241 degrees C., and helium below 268 degrees C. before they can be liquefied by pressure. All of these figures are for minus degrees. Onnes evaporates one gas to cool another below its critical point, and evaporates this in turn to produce a still lower temperature.

He liquefied methyl chloride, then evaporated it to cool ethylene to the point at which it would liquefy, and used the ethylene to cool and liquefy oxygen. When the oxygen was evaporated under reduced pressure it gave a constant temperature of -217 degrees C. It required a more complex process to liquefy helium, and when this was evaporated under reduced pressure it gave him the temperature of -271.6 degrees C.

A special thermometer containing hydrogen gas and mercury is used for measuring these very low temperatures. When Fahrenheit invented his thermometer he placed zero at 32 degrees below the freezing point, this being thought then to be the lowest temperature possible. When Celsius invented the centigrade thermometer he adopted a more rational scale, taking the temperature of freezing water at zero and that of boiling water at 100, dividing the intervening space into 100 equal degrees. The absolute scale uses the unit of Celsius, but its zero is the absolute zero, so 273.6 degrees C., or within less than 2 degrees of absolute zero.

Assurance Doubly Sure.

The enterprising company in the Soudan had decided to lay a railway into the wilds, and of course many blacks were employed in its construction.

One day the telegraph clerk at the nearest civilized spot received a telegram from the black foreman of the railway constructors: "White boss dead. Shall I bury him?"

"Yes," wired back the clerk. "But first make sure that he is quite dead. Will send another white boss tomorrow."

A few hours later another telegram came from the foreman: "Buried boss. Made sure he was dead. Hit him on the head with a shovel!" Ideas.

Chinese History.

The Chinese claim for their civilization an antiquity of from 80,000 to 100,000 years, but the claim deserves no particular consideration. Most of the eastern peoples claim for themselves a similar antiquity. There are few authentic dates in Chinese history prior to the year 800 B. C., though, of course, the Chinese civilization greatly antedates that period. It is safe to say that the Chinese is among the oldest of existing civilizations, but when it comes to being precise it is quite out of the question.
