The Evening Line-UpBoth children and grown-ups, with coughs and colds, are all the better for a dose of Foley's Honey and Tar at bed time. It wards off croup, stops tickling throat, and hacking cough, and makes an otherwise feverish, sleepless night of suffering and distress, a quiet and restful one.
BIRMINGHAM, TEXAS. Mr. Geo. Baker, writes: "My wife would not think of going to bed without a dose of Foley's Honey and Tar. It cures to bring quick relief. It is wonderful. I have used it for years and I can say it is the best remedy for children and grown-ups. It is a safe remedy, for it cures so quickly."

To the Electors of Oakland County:

My attention is called to a campaign article by Judge Smith wherein he sets forth certain reasons why he should be made the Republican nominee for Circuit Judge at the March primaries in preference to the other lawyers along this line with my voice to myself. Believing that a campaign for Circuit Judge should be conducted along the most ethical lines I purposely made no reference in my campaign announcement to Judge Smith's political career, for his infirmities or in fact to him in any way.

I regret that he wishes to make his irregular political career the issue in determining who shall be the Republican nominee at my expense and that his article not purposely designed to prejudice the electors I should make no reply.

Reference is made in his "political advertisement" to the fact that there are five Republican lawyers as well qualified as myself to hold the position of Circuit Judge and that some of them have signed his petitions. To this statement I will concede that there are not only five, but twice that number who are as well qualified for the position as myself or possibly Judge Smith. While he has personally solicited lawyers to sign his petitions, some of them, I am informed, have refused to sign them, and some of them who have signed his petitions state they do not intend to support him. On the other hand, on account of my judicial position, I have not solicited any of the lawyers to sign my petition or asked any one else to solicit them for me. Were the circuit judgeship to be determined by the Republican lawyers or from the Bar as a whole, I would cheerfully accept the result without any solicitation on my part.

Six years ago I had an ambition to be a candidate for Circuit Judge, but voluntarily withdrew at that time in order that Judge Smith might have "one more term," at which time he promised myself, other members of the Bar and made statements through the public press that if he could have one more term he positively would not be a candidate again. He now makes the promise if he can be elected for another term he will resign some time later on, so that we may contest in another campaign. Both of these promises coming from the same man and with similar emphasis need no comment from me. If a vacancy should occur on account of his age, disability or death, it would have to be filled by appointment from the Governor even though made for a short time. This appointment naturally would place any other contestant at a disadvantage. Thus it was when Judge Smith was first called to the bench by appointment at an age younger than myself.

These circumstances are met by Judge Smith with the statement that "I am alone with little patronage while Judge Rockwell has the appointment of administrators, etc." If it is Judge Smith's idea that every judicial appointment should serve as a political nucleus, then it explains plainly why certain receivers and trustees appointed by him have been personally solicited by him for their support. While the administrators and appraisers made up of men of equally as good standing and invariably appointed by myself at the suggestion of interested heirs, yet I have not solicited them in this campaign and will not endeavor to embarrass them in any way with my candidacy. Judge Smith now expresses great interest in behalf of the Republican lawyers as to their political future. To them and their friends this manifested political interest at this time must be as amusing as have his activities in the past been regrettable. His solution of which is the continuing himself on the bench until he attains an age in life which will make it impossible for him to remain longer regardless of his promises in the past. If I am honored with the circuit judgeship, it will not be in a manner befitting to the office involved, and whoever shall be decreed to be the party nominee my appreciation and loyalty to my party will continue.
