Some after the rules commence the house valley of loosed and natures have been applied to be some unless wany for the season. The king always makes the trip in the royal barree, an enormous crift about 100 feet long, in the center are two compartments; both covered in, one being the living room and the other the sleeping quarrers. On the roof of one of these compartments is creeked a manuster elebant; a sort of, kindly emblem, while on the other stately emblem, while on the other stately emblem, while on the other stately emblem, and shoot the elephant. A bound of 30 or 60 paddlers and a base of bailers, for the barge was by no quents water ight. To the accompanion of weigh of unuse and barbarie song the barge craft was propelled along on its journey, the recurs of the more and the recurs of the surrey.
