The lobby of the Botsford Inn hasn't changed a whole lot over the years it still looks like the 18th century come to life. All except George Mullin, desk clerk in his modern-day suit and tie. (Photo by Cynthia Abatt)

Botsford Inn provides a hospitality record

By ERIC PETERS

Botsford Inn in Farmington has a tradition of hospitality, having provided food and lodging for weary travelers for 110 years. It survives as Michigan's oldest country inn.

Originally built as a home in 1836 by Orrin Weston, it was converted
