

To bed, to bed, says sleepyhead

The fashion conscious woman of today lets her feminine mystique come to the fore when she picks out boudoir wear and under-pinnings.

Sensuous fabrics that cling casually, sexy details like keyhole necklines, slashes in sleeves and at the hemline, ties meant to be left untied—all are important in the lingerie getting the best attention today.

The Vassarite fall collection of daywear and sleepwear is an example of the kind of design that stresses the feminine mystique.

Bras and bikinis are sheer, lacy little things that fit to cover just enough. Stretch lace and a satinlike tricot are used almost exclusively in the bras, and all have open, plunging necklines that meet in a front-to-back wire.

Slips are luxurious underlinings that feel good and give the new, closer fitting dresses a smooth fit. Soft, chiffon like nylon is the favorite fabric for evening slips. Petticoats are made to go with tailored wool skirts are fashioned of slinky, satiny QuinTessence.

Sleepwear is sensuous, with some romantic new lines in the fall "For You" collection.

A toga ties on the shoulders and features side slashes. It can go solo or team with a pair of pull on pajamas.

Black, almost translucent nylon chiffon combines with a lace bra top for an alluring nightgown, and white enters the sleepwear collection in a dramatic gown with an elasticized material over the hipline.
