Involvement key for Northwest U-U

Increased involvement of all members in the religious and social life of the Northwest Unitarian Universalist Church of Southfield will be the goal for the coming year as the church resumes services for the fall season.

The church at 22923 Northwestern and drawing membership from a wide area, brought together its council and board of managers for a session with the minister, the Rev. Frank D. Gentile, before the opening fall service Sept. 12.

The group decided to find ways to bring present members into the activities of the church to a greater extent, while at the same time holding open a welcomed door for those interested in a church that has neither creed nor dogma.

The year's program will include Sunday services at 10 a.m. for adults and children above toddler age. Nursery care will be provided.

The opening gathering will last 15 minutes, and then the adults will join in a worship service and there will be church school classes in a program coordinated by Kitty Stokes of Birmingham.

Here the emphasis will be on understanding the physical world and society, as well as concepts from various world religions and an awareness of the gift of life.

Also scheduled for after-the-service Sunday morning discussion groups are subjects that range from the sermon to current events, art, problems of aging, loneliness, or anything else that has to do with humanness and life relationships.

Heading church meetings and events will be newly elected moderator, Ray Kines, a teacher in the Detroit school system. Other new officers are: Dorothy Amberger, Detroit, vice-moderator; Ann Williams, Detroit, recorder; Lyman Newell, Detroit, chairman of the board of managers; Joan Larson, Southfield, treasurer.

Members of the policy making body council are: Ben Berman, Birmingham.

Josephine Evatt, Ferndale; Diana Lodge, Detroit; Betty Chesson, West Bloomfield; Lerner Upton Storer and Robert Storer, Royal Oak; Rehn Goldman, Orchard Lake; Joe Levine, Southfield; and Ann Cook, Oak Park.
