one large space for entertaining. "I like the open feeling you get this way," he said. The first floor space is divided visually by furniture into a large living room and adjoining dining area.

A combination of antiques and contemporary furniture melds the historic and the "now" feeling in the house. Special moldings were milled for the house. Fluted moldings surround the windows and rosettes finish the corners of the windows.

All of this woodwork is finished in a dark stain to contrast with the white walls and the lighter stained hardwood floors and wood furniture.

"One of the nicest things about the house are the contrasts. You walk from room to room and you never know what to expect," Ms. Stehle said. She
