Women's mini retreats begin season Oct. 15

The Mini Retreats for Women, which have been offered monthly in Merck Center, have begun a second season with a new look.

Beginning Oct. 15 the retreat mornings will be directed by a team of three: Janice Brown, Sr. Gretchen Elliott and the Rev. Robert Schaden. The team approach, which is the change from last year's pattern, will provide some continuity in the retreat themes.

And the opportunity to stay for lunch will be provided this year to those who must take to extend their brief respite a little longer.

The mini retreats, which are held regularly on the third Friday of every month from 9 a.m. to 11 a.m., a new time and coincide at 11:30 a.m.

Each retreat usually involves getting acquainted over coffee, a short talk by one of the three directors, and some sharing of reflections among the women participating. There is a $2 fee for each retreat. Theophrastus lunch will be $3.50.

Women who want to attend must register by calling Sr. Gretchen at 476-8010 before noon of the day before each retreat.

Merck Center is located at 2500 Eleven Mile just east of Middle Belt.

Fun Fair on the way

Middle Belt Elementary School children and their parents have set Oct. 23 for their annual school Fun Fair, to be held in the school on Middle Belt Road, from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m.

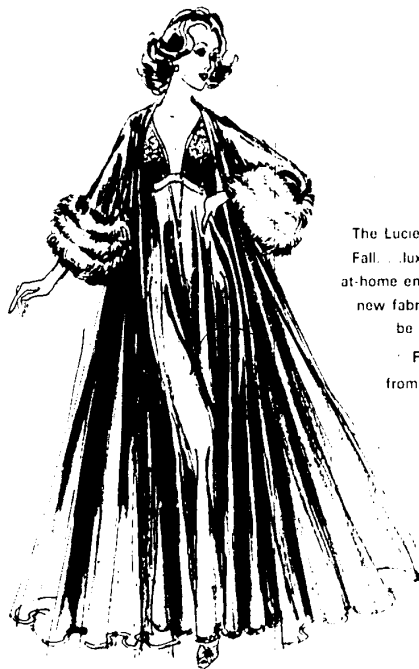

Children in grades 1-5 have created a miniature golf course using a Disney World theme and sixth grade students have conjured up a spooky haunted house to add to the fun. Parents have designed colorful booths for games, and have a plentiful supply of prizes on hand for all players.

Meanwhile, the school's principal and teachers are building courage for the wet sponge throw because they have volunteered to be the targets.

A moon walk, bake sale, cake walk, flea market, jewelry sales, hot art, hot books and Halloween pumpkins are all on the fair's agenda. Hot dog lunches and snacks will be available through the fair hours. There is no admission charge.
