Name number explained

Although I am not a believer in numerology, I have received so many questions about it that last week I devoted this column to ways of determining your birth number and name number.

One of the reasons I don't put too much stock in this science is that there are so many methods and such a wide variety of numbers at which you can arrive.

This week, I am listing the most generally accepted interpretations of the meaning of these numbers.

The number one indicative of single-mindedness, powerful character, self-reliance, pioneer spirit, creativity, leadership, a tendency to resent authority, and a love of criticism and a need to eliminate stress and external situations.

Two indicates a soft, sweet nature. Two is the gentle, quiet, peace-oriented, helpful, unassuming. Often two is said to be the most successful number.

Three indicates a sociable, warm, friendly, and generous person. But and vibrant, they are said to be the most successful number.

ed, witty, charming and outgoing, but often lack depth. They may have a tendency to waste energy and lack the ability to take anything seriously. Some might call them insensitive.

Four is said people down-to-earth, calm, steady and respectable—the pillars of society. They lack adventurous spirit, so well with routine and detail.

Five stands for nervous energy. Fives are clever, bright people, but they tend to be restless and jump. Gambling, traveling, adventure and excitement attract the faces of this world. It is hard for a five to remain faithful to anyone or anything since change and variety are the keywords in his life.

Six represents a domesticated, kindly, reliable, well-balanced person who tends to be affectionate, loyal, altruistic, conventional and wholesome.

Sevens are philosophers, scholars and mystics. They are reserved, dignified, self-controlled and serious. They care little for money and material things, but pursue spiritual knowledge and experience. Some sevens are apt to become fanatical and otherworldly if they aren't carefully taught the number of power, potency, wealth and material possession—the exact opposite of seven. Strong, tough, practical people, eight is said to be successful in business and politics.

Nines are romantic, passionate, impulsive people, realistic to the point of extreme. They have intense urges to save or serve the world. They are inspired and in spring. Nines make good teachers, preachers and artists. They tend to have humanitas as a whole, but often have difficulties in relating to another person on a one-to-one basis.

Well, does your number fit your idea of yourself? If not, and a bothers you, you could try changing the spelling of your name, changing your name altogether or just forgetting the whole thing whatever suits you best.
