Girl gymnasts starting fresh

By SUSAN TAUBER KLEIN

Farmington, North Farmington and Harrison high schools' girls' gymans-tics teams started the December-through-February gymansities season with new coaches and young teams. Each team has only three seniors and this is the first year of competition for Farmington. But each coach plans on developing the girls into strong teams for the 1977-78 season.

on.

The three schools compete in the same school league in the following crents at meets: vaulting meven bars, bulance beam, floor exercises, tumbling, and occasionally trampoline, though It Isn't part of the required events.

We should ave an excellent team the top," said Farmington's coach Jane Will.

feated Oak Park girls' gymnasties team on Jan. 12 in its first meet — $2.48.

"I don't think we'll have any problem doing well this year except with Truman (whom Farmington met Friday, Jan. 13)."

Will said her best all-arounder is Mary Kuhn, a senior. The team's top performer is junior Michelle Goyette, a returnee who excells in tumbling and floor exercise and who may replace Mary next year as the all-arounder.

"There are a lot of sophomores who are hard workers and who really try at our daily workouts at the old junioh high," the new coach said. Will, who came to Farmington late in the school year, told how Jim Lafke, the Farmington boys' gymnas, the coach, had her girls work out with his tearn. When the second had her girls work out with this tearn. Sometime of the second work of the second wore

"And," said the newly-wed, "gymnastics is very demanding for the total body; it conditions every inch."

A college senior from Central Michigan University who is student-decing at Harrison, Clappison said she is working on building her young team of 18 girls made up of six sophomores, four juniors and three seniors.

four juniors and three seniors.

"There are alot of promising sophomores who will be great for next year." Clappison said. The team practices two nights and two afternoons week in the school gym.

Harrison has its strong competitors in two all-arounders, junior Laure Payne, sophomore Laura Main, and in senior Dayle Joy.

The Dearborn Invitational on Saturday, Jan. 8. Clappison attributes their low showing to many minor injuries during the meet. "But," she said. "I had a chance to see what the other teams look like." There are a lot of sophomores who

MARY CLAPPISON, girls' gymnastics coach at Harrison, echoed Will's thoughts. "It's great the schools have this (gymnastics) for girls. It's about time," she said, explaining how the

SHE SUMMED UP her view with,
"This season looks tough."
Last season Harrison placed fourth out of seven in its league. For this year, Clappison hopes to "just go without any injuries, to have fun, and to develop our skills."
The oldest of the Farmington girls'
gymnastics teams is 10-year-old North Farmington's team, coached for the first time by Mary Johnesse, a former North gymnast.
A teacher at St. Fabian School for the past three year, Johnesse works five or six days a week and twice a month on Saturdays with her team of three seniors, six juniors and seven sophomores.

The North team makes up its own routines and puts in the stunts afterwards. Johnesee said she does help them "but they do the work themselves."

"That's the thing about gymnastics; it's an individual sport. You don't get any help from anyone else while you are out there performing," she added.

are out there performing," she added.
Diane McLean, a sophomore, may qualify for the state gymnastics meet this season. In the first meet on Dec.
6 against Ann Arbor, which North
lost, Diane received qualifying scores in two events, balance and vaulting.
Johnesse explained Diane needs four qualifying scores for each event to participate in the state meet.

And junior Kelly Lamar also re-ceived a qualifying score on the bal-ance beam in the same meet. Kelly, Diane and junior Renee May are the all-arounders for North.

"I think we'll do well this season," Johnesee predicted. "But it's a new season and I don't know too much about the other schools yet since this is my first year coaching at North."
