High heating bill? Cold weather is just one reason.

As a customer service representative, it is part of my job to answer questions about energy bills. And lately there have been a lot of calls about why bills are so much higher.

One reason is obvious. Weather - over 25 percent colder than normal. Customers are using many more units of gas, so even if fuel costs hadn't gone up, bills would still be higher.

But fuel costs have gone up. The natural gas we buy from pipeline companies costs a lot more than it used to. And these increases are also reflected in your bill.

Because your bills have increased greatly, I think it is important that you understand why they have gone up so much. I'll try to help you if you call me, but the weather and fuel cost increases are beyond our control. Probably the best advice I can give is to take all possible steps to conserve - to save both your dollars and valuable energy.

Don't forget - the bills you receive this month reflect those record breaking cold days of the last month.
