

Ramblewood was designed to fit in with the terrain.

Ramble around into 'the Hills'

Ramblewood of Farmington Hills is designed to harmonize with the terrain. There are wooded areas, natural ponds and streams and wild life.

Of this 306-acre development, one-third will remain forest land. All but three home sites back up to open space.

The private, winding roads are secured by a gatehouse at the main entrance. This manned gatehouse has a parcel-receiving system, domestics waiting area and school bus reception area.

When completed, Ramblewood is planned to consist of four "villages." Many of the homes in Village I have been sold, according to the builders. Construction has begun on Village II and Village III.

The homes have many architectural styles, representing many tastes. The Cherrywood has a sunken beamed family room with cathedral ceiling, a kitchen with separate breakfast room, four bedrooms and 2½ bathrooms.

The Birch Wood is a two-story colonial with stucco in the family room with a cathedral ceiling and stained cedar ceiling trim.

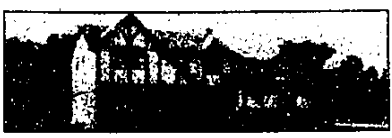

Sky lights, bay windows, winding staircases, two-story foyers, vaulted ceilings and multi-level floor plans are among the custom features of Ramblewood's homes, which are priced from $88,900.

Ramblewood runs from Fourteen Mile south to Thirteen Mile on the east side of Halstead Road.

Model hours are from 1-8 p.m. daily, Saturday noon to 5 p.m. and Sunday noon to 7 p.m.
