Road group asks equal transit status

The Oakland County Road Commission is asking that its light rail transit plan be submitted to the federal government on a par with plans being worked out by the Southeastern Michigan Transportation Authority.

SEMTA is scheduled to decide March 22 on how to narrow 13 rapid transit alternatives down to three. When a new board takes office in mid-April, SEMTA will pick a final plan.

William M. Richards, vice chairman of the road commission, said its philosophy is different from SEMTA's and the transit agency's parent organization, the Southeast Michigan Council of Governments.

"The solution is for SEMTA to submit two transit proposals for analysis by the federal Urban Mass Transit Administration."

"If, with no axe to grind, UMTA concludes that SEMTA and SEMCOG were right in charging that the road commission's plan is not feasible, that it is not expertly prepared, that it does not effectively meet the transportation needs of the region, and that it arrived on the scene too late for serious consideration, then the SEMTA plan will be left unchanged."

A SEMTA source indicated, however, chances were slight that the road commission's plan would be submitted to Washington because, as of early March, the road commission had never submitted its plan, data and original and destination survey.

The road commission presented a slide program to the SEMTA board in December, promised to deliver a detailed plan in January and has still failed to do so, the SEMTA spokesman said.

Cancer exams up in media campaign

As a direct result of Cancer Action Now's February mass media campaign, the Michigan Cancer Foundation's oral cancer detection center has scheduled nearly as many patients for free oral cancer exams during March as were screened during the last six months of 1976.

From last July through December, 117 persons were examined in the ODC. This month, 113 cases have already been scheduled and extra clinic sessions are being held to handle the caseload.

"More important than sheer numbers, however," said Dr. Daniel Martin, chief of speech pathology and oral cancer detection at the MCF, "is the fact that these patients are coming to us with suspicious symptoms that should be checked. They aren't just looking for another free service."

Cancer Action Now is the new citizens' action campaign against cancer. The five-year program is co-sponsored by the Michigan Cancer Foundation and the American Cancer Society and funded by the United Foundation in Detroit and the National Cancer Institute in Washington. More than 60 local agencies are participating in the program.

During the month of February, the largest mass media ad campaign ever used by a local public health agency resulted in the distribution of more than 70,000 copies of the program's key information booklet, "A Better Chance to Live."

Early signs of oral cancer are: a mouth sore that doesn't heal, a lump in the mouth or cheek, or persistent hoarseness. Anyone who has any of these signs should call the Oral Cancer Detection Center at 833-0710, ext. 202, weekdays, for a free examination.

For a copy of the booklet, "A Better Chance to Live," call Cancer Action Now, toll-free, at 1-800-482-9191.
