A ship in a bottle

Clifford May, a commander in the USNR, will show how to build a ship in a bottle when his nectass begins April 20 in Farmington Community Cen-ter. The craft he learned in China will be shared in a four-aession course from 1:398-320 pm., Wednes-days. Registrations are being taken in the center.

Conflict law meeting set

Hills commmittee would be appointed by the mayor and approved by the council. according to Ross.

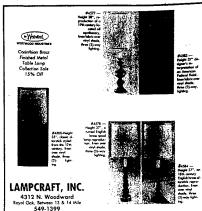

Citizens would watch to make sure that city council members would avoid appointing their friends to the committee, according to Ross.

THE LOCAL ordinance would be a replacement for a state law that was knocked down by the Michigan Supreme Court. The Court said the law encompassed too many areas of conflict of interest, according to Ross. The state bill dealt with conflict of interest and financial disclosures by officials.

"We decided to work from the bot-tom up," said Ross. "Our objective for 1977 is to get a number of Oakland County cities to pass the bill. If enough cities pass it, it may override any state wide opposition to the bill."

In addition to Farmington Hills, the Citizens Lobby is approaching persons in Troy, West Bloomfield, Oak Park and Novi.

Once local groups express interest, the Citizens Lobby will bow out and let them operate their own program to get the bill passed by the city roundin, according to Ross. The group has a copy of a model ordinance and will help the local movement to adapt that to fit the needs of their city.

Eight Farmington

Eight Farmington area students who attend Schoolcraft College have been named to the dean's list. They are Allen E. Adams. Elena J. Burke, Delyse M. Coleman, Donald E. Fradette, Danny L. Kidd, Hubert J. Marx, Al H. Odeh and Karen L. Wolff.
