Table Talk

A different cafe

By ETHEL SIMMONS

A decidedly different setting is at 3 for the Show, where you can browse for art or fashions before sitting down to lunch.

The combination art gallery, boutique and cafe is tucked behind a narrow storefront at 233 N. Woodward, Birmingham, across the street from Crowley's.

Just Desserts is the name of the informal cafe, which originally served only desserts but expanded its menu to include luncheon.

"We found people wanted another place at lunch," said Joan Weinberg, co-owner with Marcia Miller.

Ms. Weinberg explained how the two women got started in business together. "We have mutual friends and wanted to do a craft gallery. The food part was inspired by California, where foods with art and with books is a common thing to do.

THE MENU BEGINS with a soup of the day—chilled potato leek, to-mato curry, or zucchini gazpacho ($1.25 bowl, 50 cents cup). The light luncheon plates offer ham or tuna with fruit and cheese ($2.50), or just cheese and fruit ($1.85). Sandwiches are honey-baked ham or tuna, fruit and nut.

That's just about it, except for gourmet nut bread. Nut leaves are also available for carry-out, as is everything on the menu.

Gourmet coffees are a specialty, with Kilimanjaro (African) a strong blend, the house favorite; mocha, the customers' favorite; Columbian; Jamaican; Decal Columbian; and Allura; Coatepec, a Mexican blend.

The menu lists European-style pastries, for a rich dessert choice of pecan pie, chocolate cheesecake, Viennese pastry, or apple Bavarian ($1.25 a slice). Sherbert-textured, fruit-flavored, pure yogurt is scooped out by the dish or sundae.
