American Women at Chateau Thierry

by E. Buckner Kirk

AT THE COUNTER OF THE AMERICAN RED CROSS CATERINE

AMERICAN women as well as American men were at Chateau-Thierry. To be sure, it was no longer the very front itself, but it was just at the back of the front and through it passed all day long only trains and men moving up towards the trenches and men and empty supply trains coming back.

In 1914 an American woman, Frances Wilson Howard, watched hundreds upon hundreds of refugees stream along that road toward Paris.

Four years later a little group of American women were in Chateau-Thierry watching an ever-repeating procession in the other direction. The town for the possession of which so many American lives had been laid down was safe at last; so safe that the ever-cautious authorities asked for women to run a Red Cross canteen there, and thus it came about that a little group of us were able to follow our own troops into the famous village.

We set up our kiosk tent on the lawn of the chateau and from there we saw the whole panorama of war so by. It was a strange sight to women, an unendurable sight, if one could not feel that in some small human way one was of service. But our canteen, with its huge sign American Red Cross, drew troops from the road as a honey pot draws flies; and with the villagers who had come home, we were almost as popular as the fountain across the way.

"See," a young soldier said to me one day, "you're from home, aren't you? But I don't suppose you know from Indiana." For the first time in my life I would have gladly discovered my own state, if only I could have honestly said that I came from Indiana.

From our duties at the canteen, canteen or counter, we could look out upon the cross road and the fountain of the little village, two years ago unknown to most of us, now an unforgettable world in American history. For us who have been there, it is an even more unforgettable memory.

Marital Splendor Lacking.

During the period of reconstruction, when we were at the village, a motley stream of soldiers passed our canteen daily every day. One man who visited our canteen, excited by the color and variety and gaiety of the passing show, likened it to P. T. Barnum's "greatest show on earth." But we women who saw it day by day, who in however slight a measure ministered to the bodily needs of hungry American boys, tired soldiers in faded blue, slender, picturesque chausseurs, Alpins, big blue Senegalese, yellow Annamese of the salvage corps, beautiful bronze Moroccans with red fez, and an occasional group of grave young Anzacs, averaging, slugging, and snoring, were not so much amused as he. To be sure, the smooth road, winding into the little village between shattering trunks of once sturdy poplars, was often vividly alive with color and movement and comedy. But of marital splendor, in our old sense of the word, there was not a trace. No music but the grinding of hardware, the clatter of grimy camouflaged field pieces, or the creak of dusty wagons piled high with the paraphernalia of camp kitchens, or the screech of a motor horn or a madly whizzing motorcycle. Even when the road was clear of vehicles and long lines of soldiers moved over to the front or clumped dreadingly back, there was no sound of compact, marching feet. "Route marching" was the way the Americans came. The French polka, with queer bundles strung about them at all sorts of unexpected places, seemed fairly to stroll along. But they were going up to the front, these men, and however they might feel about it, it was no circus for us.

Not that the outward appearance of the moving troops was depressing. Far from it. They went by, to quote Ian Hay, "aattering homely jests like busts." Some came to buy handkerchiefs and I shall never forget the first day that American boys came into the village. "The Americans are coming," sent us flying out of doors; and "See Americans!" shouted the French authorities. Around the bend of the road by the church they came. We could hear them singing before we could distinguish the words and then—"until my dreams all come true." It was "The Long, Long Trail," which brought back to some of us vividly the first summer of the war at home, when we had danced and played and said good-bye to the music of that song.

Present From Headquarters.

One morning I looked out from the canteen upon a new scene, a surprise. Several groups of very feeble old men and women were seated upon the lawn of the chateau. A canteen dashed in breathless at this moment. The old people, according to the French account, were a present to us from G. H. Q. They had been living up near the front and some action was planned that might prove dangerous to them. So the French authorities, with their confidence, simply shipped them back to the American Red Cross canteen to be sheltered and fed for 24 hours, until they could be sent on by train to their destination. The day before they had been eaten very out of house and home, by a number of hungry French infantrymen. Now, as our canteen had not arrived, we were looking forward with dread to running short of rations for the afternoon crowd.

Every available canteen was rushed out into the byways and hedges, and in an incredibly short time the villagers had contributed enough for the day. As I often do, I expressed my doubt whether our country could make the transfer to another age intelligently. "No nation," the gardener said, "is Christian enough to avoid the cheap shot in to provide the better day. It is written." Then the gardener and I went on with her and spoke, I wonder, the calm in the truth in which he is confident he dwells.—Norman Hapgood, in Life.

Completely Lost.

A member of a stevedore company after attempting vainly to hold converse with an Algerian, entered his barracks with this announcement:

"Heah, you fellows. Outside Ah done got a nigger who donk know he is or whah he's from. I done find I was lost in France, but his boy don't cot 'sunk vidout a trace."

Attraction for Kiddies.

The children of the neighborhood found the canteen a fascinating place. They were with us all day long, slipping in and out being bored but remorselessly when we were busy or welcomed when we had time to play.

Very early in the morning little ten-year-old Pierre came up the drive with our milk pail. Then, after a couple of hot chocolate and a hunk of bread, we watched him set off sturdily for home, eight long miles away. Pierre was always our first visitor, but before the day had ended, there were a score of others.

Not far from our canteen, the Smith college unit was doing its splendid work. The members of it dropped in on us occasionally, but we heard far more of their dings and sayings from the children. "The play teacher" was a special marvel and we watched with infinite pleasure her successful efforts to teach these small people, who had learned hard lessons in the school of war, the joy of play.

The doctor, too, was a source of endless comfort and amusement to the children. To hear them talk; to wonder whether they preferred to be sick rather than well; in other words, to hear their mother's words to her attention. Some of these under her care, made unheard of journeys to distant hospitals and dispensaries. After the whole weeks of absence, Andrew, the priestess, brought a child in the village, returned from Doctor Baldwin's little Red Cross hospital at Neale, minus tonsils and adenoids and plus several pounds of soft pink flesh. She had been entirely revivified by the institution, and started her mother by demanding to be bathed, bathed every day. When the milk, harassed woman came to us for advice, I am sure she went away marveling at the madness of Americans who believed in soap and water for babies, even in the winter time.

So from the canteen at Chateau-Thierry, our little group of American women were privileged to see war in all its aspects. Color and excitement, comedy rather than tragedy, all of life we watched as we worked.

Millions are now suffering from the after effects of the deadly "flu," a fever or a cold. Their appetites are poor; they are weak, and they are waiting for their strength to come back.

If these people could only realize that the return to health and strength would be greatly helped by giving attention to the stomach—that is, restoring the acidity and toxic poisons from the entire digestive tract, making it act naturally, so that the body will receive the full strength of the food eaten—a great deal of suffering would be saved to humanity.

Everyone knows that the disease itself, and the strong medicine that have been taken, upset the stomach, leave it hot and feverish, the mouth dry, the tongue coated, a nasty taste, and no desire to eat. This is a poor foundation to build new strength on.

Now tens of thousands of people all over this country are using EATONIC for the purpose of cleansing these poisonous after-effects right out of the system and they are obtaining wonderful results. The wonderful fact, that the amazingly quick benefits are hardly believable, just as shown in the remarkable letter which is published on the request of this sturdy old Civil War veteran. He is 77 years old. Read what he says EATONIC did for him:

"I am an old soldier, past my prime, and I had the Grippe last year and it left my stomach in a bad way."

So be sure to take a box of EATONIC home with you today. We cannot urge this too strongly. If EATONIC fails to give you positive beneficial results, it will not cost you a penny. There is no risk—the benefit is surely all for you.

It is now one case out of thousands. You should make the EATONIC test in your own case at once. You have everything to gain—no penny cost to you, for we take all the risk. Your own common sense, your own feelings, tell you that a good appetite, good digestion, a good stomach with the few poisons and effects of strong medicines out of your system, will put you on the road to strong, robust health again.

You want to enjoy life again after you have had the "flu," fever or cold, or any other illness that has taken your strength. You want to get back your old-time vigor, be full of pep and enthusiasm—be able to work with ease, instead of listlessly, half-heartedly dragging out a mere existence.

So be sure to take a box of EATONIC home with you today. We cannot urge this too strongly. If EATONIC fails to give you positive beneficial results, it will not cost you a penny. There is no risk—the benefit is surely all for you.

In 1848 Sir Arthur Garrod proved that in gout (also true in rheumatism) there is deficient elimination on the part of the kidneys and the poisons within are not thrown off.

Prof. H. Strauss attributes a gouty attack to the heaping up of poisons where there is an abundance of uric acid which is precipitated in the joints and sheaths, setting up inflammation.

Before the attack of gout or rheumatism there is sometimes headache, or what is thought to be neuralgia, or rheumatic conditions, such as lameness, pain in the back of the neck, or sciatica.

As Prof. Strauss says, "The excretion of uric acid is what we are able to effect by exercise." Drink copiously of water, glasses per day, not only in the morning, but at intervals, for 60 cts. at the store and take them three times a day. If you want a trial package send 10 cents to Dr. Pierce's "Invalids" Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y.
