BANKING BILLS NEAR DEFEAT

Uniform System of Accounting for the State Passes Both House and Sent to Governor for Signature.

(Staff Correspondent)

Lansing, Mich.

Two banking bills introduced by Rep. Lynn J. Lewis, of Van Duren county, met practical defeat in the house when Rep. Lewis failed in an effort to have them taken away from the committee on private corporations. It is an almost impossible task to get a house majority to agree to take a bill away from a committee that is loath to report it out, but usually one or more attempts are made at each session by members who see the end of the session approaching while one or more bills remain in a committee pigeon-hole.

Rep. Lewis was in this position in regard to his banking bills and decided to take a long chance. As a result the bills themselves were pre-empted in the argument over taking them out of the hands of the committee. One of the bills provided for the abolishing of all private banks. The other provided that state banks could be organized in rural districts and in villages of less than 500 population, with $10,000 capital. The present law makes $20,000 the minimum capitalization of any state bank.

House members showed considerable opposition to wiping out private banks entirely, at this time. There were several opinions expressed that the days of private banks are numbered, but that this is not the right time to end them. Some praise was given them for their aid in floating the several liberty loans. It also was asserted by some members that $10,000 minimum capitalization should be allowed banks in small places whenever the private bank is abolished.

When the vote on the motion of Rep. Lewis was taken it showed seventy members opposed to it and only eight in favor of it. This showing makes it almost certain that the committee now will retain the bills to the end of the session.

Rep. Lewis had more luck with his private bill amendments, they finally passed the senate by unanimous vote without change from the way in which the house adopted them, and then going to the governor for his signature. The amendments remove all property rights to liquor.

Appropriation bills are beginning to go through the house, having the right of way over other measures. The first department bill that costumed salary increases brought on a big fight in the house. Rep. Lennon had a resolution adopted asking for specific information from the ways and means committee as to every salary increase that is asked in the budget bills. The next day the ways and means committee asked that the Lennon resolution be reconsidered, saying that it would take several days' time to try to dig out all the increases for $500 clerks, three being scores of them in single departments. The $300 salaries are being raised to $300 in nearly all cases and are not given individually, but bulked in one item for clerical hire. All important officers are mentioned individually and the amount of salary stated, so that any increases in them are readily apparent.

The house had a long fight over the matter, but finally threw out the Lennon resolution. The fight was then carried against the first bills that provided any increases, but the increases won out in each case, so the fighters became discouraged.

The house has adopted the Warner bills providing a new corrupt practice act for Michigan primaries and elections. They limit candidates for governor and United States senator to $10,000 campaign expenses; candidates for other offices to an amount equal to one year's salary of the office sought. They provide that campaign funds might be deposited with the state treasurer when a state office is sought; with the county treasurer for county offices and with city or village treasurers for city or village offices. All campaign expenses, there are to be checked out of this fund. They also change the date of the state primary from the last Tuesday in August to the second Wednesday in September. The spring primary is set for the first Wednesday in March.

The Copley bill to allow cities to take over public utilities by condemnation process has been adopted by the house. So has the bill for a commission to be named by the governor to represent the state at the formal dedication on Memorial Day of the new Michigan monument on Shiloh battlefield. The house also has passed the senate bill making September 21 a school holiday to be known as "Carleton Day," in honor of Wm. Carleton, the pioneer Hillsdale poet.

Acceptance by the house of representatives of the amendments made by the senate to the constabulary bill and the bill amending the workmen's compensation act have caused these measures to go to Governor Sleeper for his official signature. The compensation bill amendments, known as the Donald-Yung bill, had the signal fortune of going through both houses by unanimous vote.

The Bryant bill, previously passed in the senate, also has been adopted by the house and sent to the governor. It limits the state's expense in road building to one-half the cost of the road, and also allows the state to fill in gaps in roads constructed by the various counties, in order to make through state roads of them.

Considerable importance to small counties lies in the Wiley bill, adopted by the house, to permit three or more rural school districts to combine for the establishment of a rural agricultural school. Little doubt is expressed that this bill will be passed in the senate. The house also has adopted and given immediate effect to the Moore bill to permit townships, villages to cities and villages with water works to contract with them for water supplies.

The railroads have come to the front with a bill that seeks the establishment of 3-cent-a-mile fares on steam roads, in place of the long established 2-cent-a-mile fare. The senate sought an increase in the 1915 legislation, the fight for higher rates over shadowing everything else at that session. The roads lost by a narrow margin. Again in 1917 they sought an increase in passenger fares, only to have the legislature take the matter up by adopting a bill for a commission to investigate the matter of rates. The war intervened in the closing days of the 1917 session and the government took over the railroads, so no legislation was passed at that session was put on the job. The government has been charging 3 cents a mile for passenger fares, but this rate would go back to 2 cents if the roads were returned at this time or later, with no charge made in the present law.

Hence the bill to authorize the 3-cent fare.

The row over the last equalization of state taxes, following which there were charges in some quarters that Wayne county had a taxable value, has lapsed off its total assessed value, has a sequel in a bill put in by Rep. E. G. Read, of Kalamazoo. This asks that the state board of equalization be reorganized so as to consist of the auditor general, the secretary of the public domain commission and the three members of the state tax commission. At present the board is made up of the auditor general, the secretary of state, the state treasurer, the superintendent of public instruction and the chairman of the state tax commission. The proposal to put all the members of the tax commission on the equalization board has been made before and has been combated by the argument that tax commissioners would be a majority of a board to advise their own work.

A state athletic commission of five members was contemplated in a department bill, to be known as the Ben-Dufoe bill, reported out favorably to the house. It would govern all clubs licensed by it to give boxing or wrestling bouts and would get five per cent of the proceeds of all ticket sales. Referees and contest judges would have to be registered and pay fees annually. Clubs would have to deposit $2,000 bonds each and if they broke the law would forfeit their licenses and $500 of the bond money. All money taken in by the commission in excess of its own requirements would go into a fund to promote physical training in the schools.

Both houses have adopted and sent to the governor the bill to provide a uniform system of accounting for the state. This is a companion bill to the budget measure. The latter is again before the house after weeks in committee for a few final amendments. The bill to establish a state purchasing department to centralize purchases for state institutions and departments. The house also has had favorably reported to it the bills to establish county creameries and to establish a state park commission.

The senate has passed the house bill for the prevention of the spread of diseases and dangerous insect infesting trees. It also has passed the house bill for three members from each congressional district on party central committee, the object being a member in each district being allowed to give women a chance to be on the committee. The giving bill for a standard gauge of 36 inches on all vehicles using Michigan roads also has passed the senate.

Rep. Glaspey has offered a bill for a state racing commission of three members to license state, district and county agricultural fair associations to hold race meetings. The commission would make all rules and conditions governing each meeting. The bill requires that one of the members of the commission be a breeder of horses.

The Baker bill to allow banks to invest in farm loan bonds issued by federal land banks has been adopted by the senate. The law goes to the house.

IT'S NOT YOUR HEART; IT'S YOUR KIDNEYS

Kidney disease is no respecter of persons. A woman of the highest refinement today can be traced back to the kidneys. The kidneys are the most important organs of the body. They are the filters of the blood. If the poisons which are swept from the blood by the kidneys are not eliminated through the kidneys, disease of one form or another will claim you as a victim.

Kidney disease is usually indicated by weakness, sleeplessness, nervousness, dizziness, backache, stomach troubles, loss of appetite, and a general condition and ward of the danger of other attacks.

"When I became a man I put away childish things."

Not always, and hence the aphorism, "Men are but children of a larger growth."

One of the first acts of volition is when the child puts its hands, or anything it can get hold of to its mouth. In spite of reason, this instinct continues strong through life. If saliva were a bright green color we would be kept busy washing our hands. Most infectious diseases are now believed to be contracted through the mouth, with food or otherwise. As a matter of fact most of us carry our fingers to our mouth or nose many times a day and in so doing transmit to ourselves diseases that others have spread about. Beginning with instinct it has become a habit. Further comment seems superfluous—George H. Glover, Colorado Agricultural College, Fort Collins, Colorado.
