U. S. Tires Are Good Tires

U. S. Tires Are Good Tires

I was much pleased with the advertisement of automobile tires I saw the other day. I had been passing many enormous bourd-notices, gaudy in hue, striking in design, and each claiming superlative merit for their tires. "Buy Liveforever Tires! They last like steel!"
"Use Rockaway Tires! No other rides so smoothly" "You'! come to Ne Plus! Ultra Tires! Don't wait!" "The Beatofall Tire! Nothing like it!" So the shricking advertisements vibrated through the landscape. Then I saw the quiet announcement: "Smith tires are good tires." Just that, You can't imagine how restful it was, Immediately a sense of solid satisfaction came over me. "Good tires." No need to bluster and how! No need to ransack the dictionary for superlatives. No need to run down competitors, "Smith tires are good tires." I wanted to buy some at once. Those are the tires for me henceforth. "Good tires." That is the acme of advertising.

Ah, when will people learn the delicious value of quiet, self respecting simplicity?—From Christian Endeavol World.
