

A SUMMER COLD

A cold in the summer time, as everybody knows, is the hardest kind of a cold to get rid of. The best and quickest way is to go to bed and stay there. If you can, with a bottle of "Roschee's Syrup" handy to insure a good night's rest, free from coughing, with easy expectoration in the morning.

But if you can't stay in bed you must keep out of draughts, avoid sudden changes, eat sparingly of simple food and take occasional doses of Roschee's Syrup, which you can buy at any store where medicine is sold, in a safe and efficient remedy, made in America for more than fifty years. Keep it handy.—Adv.

Wrong Place to Hurry.

Bob Bailey, statehouse elevator operator, was chaperoning his elevator, as usual, one morning, when in dashed a dashing stenographer, who cried out: "Hurry, Bob. Hurry up. I'm forty-five minutes late. You're so slow."

Bob operated the elevator leisurely, as usual, but finally reached the desired floor. The D. S. ran to her room and Bob turned to a bystander and said:

"She lost forty-five minutes making up this morning, and gets mad at me because I can't make it up for her in a seventeen seconds trip on the elevator."—Indianapolis News.

FAMOUS PEACE TREATIES

By H. IRVING KING

(Copyright, 1918, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

TREATY OF BUENOS AYRES, 1823

When South America Emerged From Spanish Domination, Uniting the Revolted Colonies.

The independence of Spanish South America was rendered possible by the Treaty of Buenos Ayres, which united all of Spain's revolted colonies below the isthmus of Panama in a league against the mother country or any other country which should question their right to set up for themselves as free and independent nations.

Strangely enough, the South American revolution started in aid of the legitimate king of Spain, Ferdinand VII. Napoleon having placed his brother Joseph on the throne of Spain, Venezuela, New Granada (Colombia) and Buenos Ayres (Argentina), revolted almost simultaneously in 1810, deposed the royal officers, and established juntas with the avowed purpose of holding those colonies for King Ferdinand. In March 1811 a Venezuelan congress was convened and on July 5 a declaration of independence was adopted. In New Granada the province of Cartagena declared its independence in the same year. The province of Guadalupe, proclaimed itself independent "during the captivity of the king." The eastern provinces sought an alliance with Venezuela. Meantime, a revolution broke out in Ecuador, which was joined by the part of New Granada adjoining, but this seems to have been a rather mixed up affair, the revolutionists not exactly sure of what they wanted.

The revolution in Buenos Ayres spread over all that section, but it was not until after independence was declared, what is now the Argentine Republic, taking the name of the United Provinces of La Plata. Paraguay which revolted in 1810, proclaimed its independence the next year and refused to unite with La Plata, which, as yet, had not revolted. Uruguay had been made a part of Brazil in some of the royal decrees of the emperor of Europe and was held by a Portuguese army. The revolution broke out in Chile in 1812 and was suppressed only to break out again. It was not until 1818 that Chile finally declared her independence.

1814 King Ferdinand had been restored to the Spanish throne, so those colonies which remained in revolt and had not declared their independence were considered as rebellious against the independence or existence as governments.

Between the beginning of the uprisings in 1810 and the Treaty of Buenos Ayres in 1823 there was a constant warfare between the Spanish and colonial forces, each colony playing a lone hand. Peru was the center of the Spanish power and from there the Spanish viceroys waged war on the other colonies. In Upper Peru, or what is now Bolivia, however, there was a strong antagonism to the viceroys which spread gradually to the other parts of viceroys and rendered the Spanish supremacy precarious. In 1821 this Peruvian movement had gained such strength that an assembly of Peruvians declared independence, though the viceroy still held his post and, by the command of the sea which he possessed and the strength of the royal forces, still fought to subdue South America to the Spanish crown.

In 1822 Brazil declared its independence of Portugal and set up as an empire under the head of the royal house of Braganza, who gave up his claims to the Portuguese throne. In the month which passed around her to South American Brazil took no part. Her revolution was peacefully accomplished and her independence peacefully secured. But all Spanish-American provinces could not even agree among themselves and were rent by international discords. It looked as if Spain, by a vigorous effort, might yet restore her authority in South America, attacking the revolted colonies in detail.

Simon Bolivar had now succeeded in forming out of Venezuela, New Granada and Ecuador the Republic of Colombia. He saw that union was necessary for the securing of the independence of the colonies and in January of 1823 sent Don Joaquin Mosquera to Buenos Ayres to propose a defensive alliance of the United Provinces of La Plata and the Republic of Colombia.

Hoped to Have Colonies Unite.

Ritadavia was provisionally in charge of the La Plata government. His idea was to have all the colonies unite in a peaceful understanding with the mother country by which the revolution should be completed; he was evidently listening to the wiles of the royal commissioners. Mosquera insisted upon a military alliance against Spain.

The result was that for the first time Spanish South America showed a united front. The treaty was signed on March 8, 1823. On December 8, 1824, was fought in southern Peru the battle of Ayacucho in which General Sucre with the allied army defeated and captured the Spanish viceroy. La Plata. Fourteen Spanish generals gave up their swords that day and the war of independence was at an end, except for a few minor engagements.

TREATY OF FREDERIKSHAVN, 1809

Sweden Gave Up to Russia All of Finland and the Aland Islands.

Amid the breaking up of empires, the birth of new nations and the rebirth of old ones, Finland seems to have come in for a place as an independent country, something that she never has been before since the thirteenth century, when the Finns were subjugated and Christianized by the Swedes. For over a hundred years Finland formed an integral part of the Swedish realm and furnished to that kingdom a host of men eminent in war and peace. Under Swedish rule Finland enjoyed an autonomous constitutional government and developed a unique civilization of its own. Swedish was spoken in the towns and by the cultured class, but the peasant class clung to the old Finnish tongue.

Then came the invasion of Finland by Russia in 1809 and the treaty of Frederikshavn, by which Finland passed to Russia and the troubles of the Finns began.

The Finns are a rather singular people to find in the northwestern corner of Europe, being Mongolians, a tribe of that race which, wandering or driven from the great plateau of Central Asia, found a resting place at last between the Baltic sea and the Arctic ocean.

Near the Finnish Border.

When Peter the Great built his new capital amid the swamps of the Neva he placed it only that hour Russia had looked upon Finland as something that must eventually be hers. The adventures of Charles XII of Sweden afforded Peter his first opportunity to seize a part of the coveted territory. Charles was determined to crush the growing power of Russia as Peter was to make her the "colossus of the North." At the battle of Poltava, June 27, 1709, fought in what now calls itself the Ukraine, the destinies of the two nations for a while hung in the balance. But "victory passed to the triumphant czar" and Charles escaped by a flight into Turkey. By the treaty of Abo in 1721 Peter granted peace to the exhausted Swedes, but only upon their relinquishing the Baltic provinces to Russia and also the province of Viborg, a part of Finland. By taking Viborg Peter pushed the Finnish border back and when the French ambassador interceded for the retention of this province by Sweden, Peter replied that it "was not pleasant to see his neighbor's grounds from his own windows."

But a good chance to grab all Finland did not present itself to Russia until the general upheaval of the Napoleonic wars. After the peace of Tilsit, Russia and France being allies, the czar had a free hand with regard to Sweden and resolved to seize Finland. He called it himself "an act of bad faith toward a relative and an ally."

In February of 1808 a Russian army invaded Finland. The aged and incapable field marshal Klingor, who commanded an army of Finns and Swedes in Finland, was ordered by the panic-stricken Swedish king, Gustavus IV, to save his troops as best he could.

"Gibraltar of the North."

With the fall of Stoenborg, which the Swedes called the "Gibraltar of the North," all hope of saving Finland was lost; but during the summer a Finnish army fought several battles with the Russian troops not without success. In the fall, however, the Russian army was increased, and on September 14 was fought the battle of Oranien, famous in Finnish annals. The battle lasted 16 hours and was only decided in favor of the Russians by the timely arrival of re-enforcements. In this battle the Swedes and Finns lost 2,600 killed, one-third of the whole force with which they went into battle. The remnants of the army withdrew under the cover of night, when the increased number of Russians made it folly to continue the battle and crossed the Swedish frontier. Finland was now lost. In Stockholm when the disastrous news reached there, the king was deposed and his son, Prince Charles made regent. In Sweden lay a French army under Bernadotte—destined to become king of Sweden later—ready to attack. The regent now turned his attention to Russia and attempted to drive out a Russian army which occupied West Bothnia. He was unsuccessful, but finally that army withdrew of its own accord. The czar now signified that he was willing to treat for peace and on September 17 signed at Frederikshavn a treaty by which Sweden gave up to Russia all of Finland and the Aland Islands. After that treaty Finland was in a constant state of unrest and contention with her Russian masters. Now she proposes to set up for herself.

Philosophic Loser.

He was a cheerful philosopher. He had just lost a close game of golf, and his friends were sympathizing with him.

"Don't sympathize with me," he said. "I've had great fun. It was a tough match and I should like to try you, but don't overlook the fact that I've had the joy of a good game. Save your sympathy for the poor devil who can't get any pleasure out of a sport unless he wins."

If that isn't philosophy we don't know what is.
