The evening was spent in dancing, a good social time and a monker, music be-ing furnished by a violin and pino, there being about 150 guests present. During the dancing there appeared two thack-faced aritiss, (dressed as man and wife, although both were ladies), carrying a "Coupie' dressed as an infant; the bridd was given the "haby," and compelled to carry it through a walt, creating an un-usual amount of amusement.
