FRANKLIN K. LANE TO "FOLLOW ON"

Accepts Invitation to Become National Chairman of Salvation Army's Annual Appeal for Funds.

WASHINGTON'S BEST BELOVED
RESTARTING LIFE AT 55.

Former Cabinet Officer Before Entering the Oil Business as an Executive for the Doherty Interests Will Lend His Great Abilities to the Church Militant Organization.

Franklin K. Lane, referred to far and wide as "Washington's best loved man," is undertaking two notable innovations at an age when most men think mainly of retiring to the quiet of private life. One is to "earn enough money" to support his family and keep his "shirt-sleeved" life; the other is to step down from a high place to resume my place among the shirt-sleeved boys and give them a hand if I can.

Two history making statements from a man of Mr. Lane's attainments and "the life" and the remarkable part of it all is that he puts the shirt-sleeved matter—the thing about helping his neighbors—ahead of that other thing—making more money in order to be able to underwrite the Autumn of his life!

Few men reach a higher niche in the affection and confidence of the public mind than has this remarkable man from the West, who was once an editor, then a lawyer and finally a member of the President's cabinet and who, with his from public life to "earn a better living" after rendering a service to the government the extent and value of which would be impossible to estimate. Still fewer men are called to such responsible places as Franklin K. Lane is now to occupy. He will enter the oil business as an executive for the Doherty interests and will be established in New York city for that purpose by April 1. But the rosy prospect of "a living wage" after several years spent in struggling along on the salary of a cabinet officer has not blinded Mr. Lane to another opportunity—that for striking a few powerful blows on behalf of the "man who is down, but never out."

Franklin K. Lane has accepted an invitation from Commander Evangeline Booth to become the national chairman for the Salvation Army's annual appeal for funds in 1920. He is already on this job, although Wall Street does not greet him as an oil well executive for another month.

"It is a genuine privilege to find opportunity for encouraging a work so direct and practical and so valuable to the masses, and only by that method can we, in the Salvation Army," said Mr. Lane at his office in Washington the other day. "When Commander Miss Booth asked me to take the responsibilities of national chairman for the 1920 appeal of that organization," continued the secretary, "the first thought that flashed across my mind was, How can I spare time for such work when I am entering upon a commercial task of great responsibility?"

"And then there flashed across my mind a vision of the things the Salvation Army does—the help it gives to men and women and little children just when they need it most, and I thought to myself that after all there would be no more important thing than this. So I accepted—along with the other job—and I am trusting to the generosity of my new employers to indorse my action in the matter."

"I believe in America owes the Salvation Army some of its right or her time every year. And I am going to pay my share. I am going to get my shoulder squarely behind the movement for human aid and relief to the poor and for the poor themselves, the high cost of living, has been a troublesome factor in recent months. Money does not go far these days, but there's no one in the world who can get more worth-while work out of a dollar than can the Salvationists. In this country they gave away 3,699,767 meals in the twelve-month ending last September 30, and provided 371,334 meals besides at approximate cost. They supplied beds for 1,811,547 night lodgings and 1,468,887 meals in the twelve-month ending last September 30, and in addition to all this and to all that was done for thousands in the Army institutions they gave temporary shelter to 700,000 persons."

the confidence of the common people like this Salvation Army has been in recent years. I am going to pull off my coat and do some real work that will show where I stand when it comes to weighing in the lonely, untempered and highly practical relief methods of this amazing band of workers. I heard the call. The problems of the poor are there to be solved, and they can use my poor efforts perhaps, so I have answered the call.

"I won't do much talking in the coming drive. I will do real work, and when I do talk I don't want to talk to anyone but actual workers. There will be no speech making by me to those who might be curious to hear a former cabinet officer in action, but who are not interested in the work of the Salvation Army. I shall talk to workers and only to workers. The day for oratory in such matters has gone. We are doing it by brass tacks."

"I think I am as a citizen of America to show my understanding and appreciation of the helpful work the Salvation Army is doing in its rescue homes, maternity hospitals, free clinics, industrial homes, fresh air farms and tenement house relief work. My testimony is not needed, however, in this matter. There are 2,000,000 or 3,000,000 of young Americans who went into the recent war without having any use for its methods if they did know of it. So far as I can learn these men came out of that war unanimously on one subject—and that was that the Salvation Army understood the average man, knew how to deal with him and simply 'delivered the goods' on the 100 per cent basis."

"There is no division of opinion on that one subject. There could have been no greater test for the Salvation Army than the test it received in the war. So after all I am merely adding my voice to the mighty chorus I have referred to when I say that the Salvation Army has long since won the right to make an appeal to the rest of us for its maintenance, and I am sure it will not make that appeal in vain."

"The Salvation Army one year ago abandoned its old custom of begging in the streets the year around so that its workers could devote all of their time and attention to the poor. It makes its annual appeal each May. Personally I know of no greater bar to that could be raised against the rising tide of human unrest than to strengthen the hands of this band of self-sacrificing Christian workers who have the confidence of all men and women, regardless of race, creed, color or position in life. I think it is important for the interests of our advancing civilization that such a practical and wholesome work be stimulated and maintained to the utmost."

"They say there are no 'down and outers' any more. Personally I do not believe it, or if I did believe it I would know that the abnormal times have swung the pendulum back too far on one side—and that it will swing far to the other side directly. There will always be a bottom to society. The poor will always be with us. We owe it to our fellow men to know our neighbors and share his troubles and problems, and only by that method can we, in all fairness and righteousness, keep the scales even in this life."

"I am proud to face the problems of the poor with the Salvation Army in such a trying hour, and I hope that American men and women will stand with me in the work ahead of us. But they must be workers. I shall have no time to entertain mere observers."

Both for the organization that gives aid and relief to the poor and for the poor themselves, the high cost of living, has been a troublesome factor in recent months. Money does not go far these days, but there's no one in the world who can get more worth-while work out of a dollar than can the Salvationists. In this country they gave away 3,699,767 meals in the twelve-month ending last September 30, and provided 371,334 meals besides at approximate cost. They supplied beds for 1,811,547 night lodgings and 1,468,887 meals in the twelve-month ending last September 30, and in addition to all this and to all that was done for thousands in the Army institutions they gave temporary shelter to 700,000 persons."
