"We give financial support, attend meetings, provide transportation and serve as advocates with the Department of Social Services," Mrs. Tyson said.

"There are friends in every community in the every community in the every community in the every community in the service in Farmington. Southfield, Pontiac. Rochester—just everywhere.
"One of our problems is that there's a stigma about welfare, and when people hear that word, they turn off. That's why we're so thrilled that one of Birmingham's leading theater groups are doing this benefit."
"It's the first time, and this benefit. "It's the first time, and it's almost 10 years, that anyone at all did a benefit for us. We do get support from churches and civic groups in the area."

MRS TYSON explained that in past years, welfare rights groups were looked on as near-subversives. She added that the founder of the national group, Dr. George Wille, a biochemist, was 'hounded for years by the CIA."

"Dr. Wylie gave up his entire career to unite poor people." she said.

"He taught poor people what their rights are. But he died in a drowning accident in 1973." A biography of Dr. Wylie by Nick and Mary Lyrn Kotz, called "A Passion for Equality," will be available at the March 23 performance. Kotz is a Pulitzer Prize winner.

Kotz is a Pulitzer Prize winner. Oakland County's Welfare Right Organization grew from the seeds planted by Dr. Wylie. Though the group is well established now. Mrs. Tyson said welfare recipients have ongoing problems now, many centered around the way they are treated by the utilities.
