Dear Doctor:

We are in the market for a puppy and our family is having a big discussion on where he will sleep at night. Is it O.K. to keep a puppy in a large box overnight?

J.R., Farmington

Dear J.R.:

Not only is it O.K., it is highly recommended since it will greatly facilitate his housebreaking. Puppies, by nature, are very clean and don't like to lay in their own messes. If they are confined to a small enough area, they will hold their eliminations, providing you let them exercise at frequent intervals.

FOR KIDS

Your new puppy's first day away from his mother and littermates is a very scary time for him. Be sure to introduce him to his new home in a calm, reassuring way. Don't overwhelm him with lots of visitors, and let him do the exploring and visiting in his own good time.
