

At the Raven

Folk guitarist is audience pleaser

A real crowd pleaser has come "home" to Southfield's Raven Gallery. He's Chuck Mitchell and he's sure to bring his own following into the haven for folk music.

He plays six and 12-string guitars, sings and talks. He'll talk about life and being happy, about things serious and whimsical, and even get political once in a while.

He'll get into Mike (Juarez) Smith's compositions and perhaps some Pete Seeger and maybe he'll even recite some poetry or get his audience into the act too.

Mitchell has a soft approach but it kind of grows on his audiences. If you're a Chuck Mitchell aficionado, then that's that. You're probably a regular at the Raven when he's in town.

With a new menu, somewhat simplified, the Raven is doing a bit less on the eat side but doing it better, which is exactly the aim or proprietress Kit Cohen.
