People who know me as a not-too-long-from-now-to-be mother of the bride keep asking how wedding preparations are going.

So I'll try an update report on the progress of a project I keep thinking of as far in the future, but one that keeps creeping up with inexorable steadiness.

First, I should and do point out that most of the moving forward for the wedding coming in September is being accomplished by our daughter and prospective son-in-law. It's their project and they're being most efficient in making arrangements.

They've lined up church, reception hall, clergymen, music and supporting cast. They also have made major decisions about food and invitations and matches and flowers and band.

Just now they're addressing invitations and hoping the postal workers' contract settlement sticks, and somehow in the midst of all this they managed to buy a house and make progress toward the settlement thereof.

I do, however, have a few functions.

I'm working my way through the construction of three attendants' dresses and the long-distance direction of one being sewn in North Dakota.

I've cut and handled umpteen pieces of althor gauze and made major decisions like "dimples" in the sleeves. I fully expect not to be running the sewing machine furiously at the 11th hour.

Less successful are my functioning in another area. I'm seeking, with so far nil results, a song by Johannes Brahms that was sung by a long-ago friend when the man of our house and I were married a quarter century ago.

I know some of the words, and the melody begins dan-dah-DAH-dah-dah-dah-DAH, but so far neither I nor a musical friend have been able to find it inscribed in notes on a staff.

And one more arrangement we're all working on—we're wondering how to persuade a couple of football teams to play fast so the bride's father will be there to give her away.

It may be cutting it close, he tells her, but how can he be expected to miss his alma mater's one visit to this area this season. He's kidding, of course. He's GOT to.

We're far along toward a major task in daughter-rearing. Before we know it, we'll dance at the wed-ding. Back to the sewing machine.

Farmington Hills City Hall
31555 Eleven Mile Road
Farmington Hills, Michigan 48018

The City of Farmington Hills Planning Commission will give formal consideration to a Proposed Amendment (Zoning Request No. 22-78) which would rezone part of the West ½ of the Southeast ¼ of Section 33, City of Farmington Hills, County of Oakland, State of Michigan, being more particularly described as:

Lot 72, Redford Township (W. ½, S. ¼ SEC 33 T. IN. R. 9 E.), City of Farmington Hills, Oakland County, Michigan.
