3 plays, more performances on players' season lineup

The Farmington Players will present "A Streetcar Named Desire," "The Importance of Being Earnest" and "The Philadelphia Story" during their 1978-79 season. Each play will run 10 performances. Last year, nine performances of each of the three shows were sold out and an additional night was added to accommodate the unprecedented demand for tickets to "A Doll's House."

"Streetcar" will run Nov. 3-5, 9-12 and 16-18. "The Importance of Being Earnest" will be given Feb. 16, 22, 25 and March 13. "Philadelphia Story" will be staged May 4-6, 10-13 and 17-19.

Season tickets are now on sale, with a new package available, which will permit season ticket holders to mix nights instead of being confined to a particular night, from Thursday through Sunday, for all three shows.

A Saturday package is $11.25. A Friday or Sunday package is $9.75. Thursdays are $8.25.

Players wanting a mixed schedule are asked to call the box office, 477-1066, for rates.

ORDERS for individual performances will be accepted beginning Oct. 2. Single tickets are $4 for Saturday; $3.50 for Friday and Sunday and $3 for Thursday.

Nancy Harrower will direct "A Streetcar Named Desire." It will be her fourth directing assignment with the players.

Her credits include "Come Blow Your Horn," "Death of a Salesman" and "Othello." She has been a director and performer in Detroit area community theater groups for more than 26 years.

Ralph Rosati, who directed a workshop production of Act III of "Play It Again, Sam" at the players' summer picnic, will direct "The Importance of Being Earnest."

He appeared in "Hay Fever" and "The Bat" during the 1977-78 season.

He comes to the Farmington Players from the Roseale Players, where he directed a full-scale production of "Play It Again, Sam."

Hope Nahstoll, a charter member of the players, is back as a director for "The Philadelphia Story." In her more than 25 years with the group, she has also directed "Inherit the Wind," "George Washington Slept Here," "Strange Bedfellows," "The Hasty Heart" and others.

She is a past president of the organization and has built the players' costume collection into one of the finest in the Detroit area. She was most recently seen on stage last spring as Cornelia VanGorder in "The Bat."

After mastectomy, confidence with the Airway Companion III.

One of the nicest features of the Airway Companion III prosthesis is its naturalness, which lets you be naturally confident. Of silicone gel, it looks and feels like you, there's no need for a special bra, and it's wash and wear. It's also comfortable, duplicating the contours, softness and mobility of original tissue.

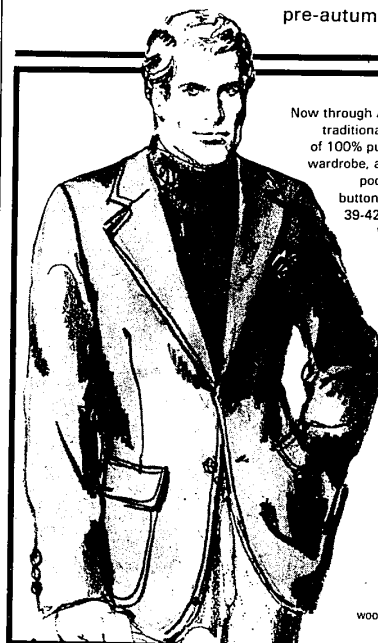

There's more good things to say about the Companion, and an excellent person to do so is Mrs. Earlene Woodard of Airway who will be here on from 10:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m.

We invite you to question and consult with her. Our own capable people in Foundations will share their expertise with you. You may call to arrange for an appointment at your convenience.
