

Dress up! Turn on to drop-dead pizzazz

High Chic, Exaggerated Chic, Sophisticated Chic, Glamour Chic—whatever you call it—means simply that CHIC is back! No more voluminous peasant dressing—no more tattoos—and jeans and a silk shirt will get you nowhere.

You are now expected to change from a sexless lump into a super chic siren—to discard the dressed-down look for the dressed-up look.

It means you will have to try harder, to care about the way you and everything about you looks. It's time to make an effort to regain the confidence that comes with looking chic and knowing it. The purpose of fashion has always been to turn ugly ducklings into swans. This concept is being realized as never before.

FEATHER CHIC promises to make fall fashion entrances a happening. Status jewelry designer Barry Kieselstein-Cord's fall prediction is, "You will see a lot of feather pieces—very dramatic."

"You wear it when you make the entrance and then after everyone has dropped on the floor, you can remove the feathers and you have a piece of jewelry."

So said the designer of his $4,200 pheasant feather piece which combines feathers with an acid finish gold loop. We saw the piece modeled by Sydell Schubot at Jules R. Schubot, Inc., Troy.

Orlanda Olsen's 14K gold cigarette holder is an upper-index finger ring that is guaranteed to knock 'em dead at fall soirées. Even if you've given up cigarette smoking as a n accession to physical fitness, it is guaranteed to start a conversation—that is, after everyone has picked themselves up off the floor (available at Claire Pearone, Troy).

Travelling on the theory that accessories make the difference this fall—you could wear any old rag with sparkling shoes by Rossi.

The fall prediction is that dancing through the evening in these star-studded disco shoes will leave you plenty of space on the dance floor because the dramatic impact of the shoes would "knock 'em dead." You could simply dance over prone bodies. (Claire Pearone, Troy)

Jeremy Hawley, designer and artist, sees you dripping in soft-soil, chamolix suede this fall—all feathered and fringed and wearing western boots and an authentic cowboy hat. (Hattie's, Inc., Birmingham)

Maureen Mono combines drop-dead chic gold enhanced cosmetics with a gold embossed gown. She uses all her skills as a former British actress, American "Ponds girl," and a fashion makeup artist to convey Glamour Chic. (Lord & Taylor)

Claude Payne, the native Detroitier whose designs took New York's 7th Avenue by storm, sees his women as sophisticated chic ladies in chiffon and crepe de chine for luxury lounging or the disco scene. (Me & My Lady, Royal Oak)

The sparkle of gold sequins on a '40s style black crocheted snood snuggles with a white maribou cape. Both are remnants from a bygone closet which proves that old chic never dies. (Me & My Lady, Royal Oak)

An Imperial Dynasty Chinese robe debuts as high chic for the sophisticate who entertains at home. This rare, one-of-a-kind piece is handmade and hand-beaded. (Dulaney's, Birmingham)

Andre Laug proves a plated skirt topped by a blazer jacket is drop-dead chic this fall. It's all in your attitude! (Saks Fifth Avenue, Troy)

Charmeuse, suede and an updated version of the riding habit combine for "black is back" drop-dead chic by Donna Karan for Anne Klein.

The only accessory you will need to enhance the slink of black evenings is one earring. Provided, of course, that it is made of black dyed peacock feathers suspended on a rhinestone studded ring. (Claire Pearone, Troy)

Kieselstein-Cord believes a notable entrance should include his pheasant feather necklace. Once the effect has registered, remove the feathers and continue the party wearing his acid finish gold loop.

Maureen Mono recalls the '30s and the Duchess of Windsor with gold embossed gown, gilt tinged makeup and elegant hairstyle that was the trademark of the woman who enticed a king from his throne.
