Seniors to benefit

agencies are the ones who need help working with older adults," the Southfield resident said.

Tait said the experiences changed his life.

"I learned there's no such word as can't. There's a lot I don't want to do but nothing I can't do. The training from the Continuum Center and working with other people has helped me communicate better with my wife, children and grandchildren."

Watching how well older adults work with their peers was a step that prompted the Older Adult Project staff to think about the training needs of service providers.

Working with agency people offered another type of insight. Panel members Kathryn Hoard, director of Walter P. Reuther Southwest Senior Center, and Suzanne Szczepanski, assistant director of Area Agency on Aging, both expressed their frustration at seeing untrained service providers work with older adults, trying to present meaningful programs to them.

"About half the people who come in to provide services haven't had any training in gerontology," said Ms. Hoard.

Anyone interested in participating should contact Mrs. Waters or Mrs. Reiter at the CC at 377-3033.
