Braillists explain their work at tea

Volunteer braillists and large print typists around the world provide textbooks, recipes, instruction manuals and musical scores for blind and visually impaired persons.

In this area, volunteers are trained in the use of braille machines through the Nardin Park Braille Transcribers, the local unit of the Tri-County Braille Transcribers.

Cara Lynn Pender, a Redford Township resident and new president of the local unit, opens the group's fall sessions with an orientation tea to explain the work of the group to those who have already signed up for classes, and all others who are interested in learning of the work the braillists perform.

The tea is set for 1 p.m. Wednesday, Sept. 13, in Nardin Park United Methodist Church, located on Eleven Mile, west of Middlebelt in Farmington Hills.

Fall classes in braille instruction begin the week of Sept. 25.

A morning class, from 10 a.m. to noon, will be conducted by Marge Griep, of Livonia, who has brailled more than 2,500 pages.

Dee Sosaitis, of Farmington Hills, a former president of the group, will conduct either an afternoon or evening Monday class, depending on requests.
