

Mother and daughter

Fall is the time of year that persons of all ages hang on to the waning warmth and memories of summer's delights. West Bloomfield resident Susana Pettibone and daughter, Heather, 21 months, enjoy a romp together on a fall afternoon in City of Farmington park. This photo was inspired by the bestselling book, "My Mother, Myself," by Nancy Friday. She recently appeared in the area to speak on the importance of mother-daughter relationships. Ms. Friday believes the mother-daughter relationship to be the most important and basic one in a woman's life. Another facet to her thesis is that we become like our mother because we are afraid of losing her. Ms. Friday's conclusions about mothers and daughters came in painstaking research in some 300 interviews with women and experts in the field of sociology and psychology.
