DETROITERS who visit Chicago come home raving about the well dressed people they see on the streets. Would you believe a Detroiter turned the tables and stopped the chic Chicagoans in their trades?

That's what Birmingham's Marilyn Berman did last weekend. Dressed in that special total Hattie look, she rocked them on their heels. People commented in elevators.

"You certainly do know how to put yourself anonymous admirers

AT SAKS FIFTH AVENUE the All SAKS FIFTH AVENUE the guys, anxious to join the gals wearing status labels on their rears, are tired of waiting for long promised Calvin Klein jeans for men. They're invading the women's department-trying on not only Calvin's but Anne Klein's jeans as well.

MEN'S FUR designer, John Stevens, found himself, or more specifically, his ad in GQ, a major topic of conversation when he visited Detroit recently to show his and Stephen Burnow's furs, to Claire Pearone's clientele. His turn-about ad shows a man languidly reclining nude beneath a fur cpt. The control of the control of Sevens found himself in the middle of back and forth banter at a Renaissance Center cockail party marking the opening of the Ungaro Boutique, recently. The question of the day was "Are you man enough to wear a fur coat?" Until, finally, someone nudged someone after recognizing the designer. Stevens said, however, that be took the whole thing in stride. Stevens also said the controversial

THE FALLACY of investing good money in fad flashes of fashion becomes more evident each season. Among the out-out-out items that dazded em last year are the revoltingly utdoutious shawl, scarres knotted at the ends, and gaucho pants.

But, watch for the return of the jump suit. This time around it's in slinky, slithery evening guise.

IT'S SHAPING up to be the year of the accessory-particularly lariats, sings, belts and big pins. Feathers and furs, glows and hats, high heeled shoes and short books are all a must. Large, soft, slouchy pouch bags are going, going, gone as a fashion look. Smartly tailored, more structured handbags are back for day.

Things to be careful of are tails flying all over trendy furs, initials, yours or the designers all over everything, and crash diest that deplete your body of moisture and add 10 years to your face. Fashion is fun, but some fads can be fatal to your image.
