

Weed Garden For Next Year

Look over the vegetable garden to make certain that any weeds in it are pulled before their seeds ripen. Such "seed" weeds are poor prospects for the compost pile.

It is more sensible to burn them, thus getting rid of many potential weeds.

Humidifier Needs Fall Checkup, Too

Although warm weather is still with us, it's not too early to think about getting your home's heating plant in shape for winter.

In fact, you can avoid delays that normally occur when the first cold day arrives and heating contractors get busy with service calls.

"An important part of a furnace check-up is inspection of your humidifier," says engineers.

Some humidifiers quickly clog up with lime and sediment that make them useless. Others need replacement of plates, belts or wheels to put them into shape. And, in some cases, a humidifier may be missing altogether.

HEATING experts agree that a home needs a humidifier to assure that the indoor relative humidity stays around 35 to 40 per cent.

If humidity drops below this range, furniture and woodwork start to warp, static electricity becomes a problem, your nose, throat, and skin feel dry, and more heat is needed to keep you warm.

"But just because there's a humidifier on your furnace doesn't mean that you're safe," say engineers. "The humidifier has to be the right size for your house, and it has to be in top operating condition. That's why a humidity check at the start of the season is important."

THE SIZE of humidifier you need is based on the size of your house and its age. The older a house is, the more air leakage usually occurs. The more cold outside air that enters the house to be heated, the more humidification capacity you need.

Engineering studies show your home may need as much as 20 gallons of water vapor added to the inside air on a 0 degree day to maintain a comfortable humidity level. You should have a heating contractor figure out exactly what size humidifier you need.

Regardless of capacity, your humidifier should be a self-cleaning type that works well under all types of water conditions and requires minimum maintenance.

THE BEST unit of this type (Humid - Aire F100) uses bronze mesh "humid - discs" that rotate on a steel shaft in a stainless steel water reservoir.

Don't wait for winter...

Replace your old fashioned furnace now!

Keeping your old furnace for another year can mean big problems this winter. Even if it doesn't break down, chances are it will be inefficient. Heating bills will be sky-high. And it may even be a fire hazard.

To prevent all this, just call Central Heating. With over 40 years of experience, they'll tell you the most efficient way to solve your heating problem. And the price will be a lot lower than you'd expect.
