Down to earth

Finding an old-fashioned Christmas

Do you ever stop in this season and wonder what life is all about?

Greenfield Village has the answer as it presents traditional holiday festivities for all to enjoy. A visit to the village is refreshing entertainment for holiday houseguests as well as restless members of your family.

With harness bells jingling, have a sleigh ride around the village. You can stop at the Town Hall on the village green and have complimentary hot, spiced cider. If there isn't snow, you can have a ride in a horse-drawn carriage.

At the village bakery there are cooling demonstrations. Minicorn tarts are being prepared at the Stephen Foster home. Hearth cooking is shown at the 1620 Cotswold Cottage and old fashioned candy making at the Edison Homestead.

All of the famous homes are decorated for Christmas.

In Henry Ford Museum you will see an old fashion Christmas tree with historic toys for children through 200 years.

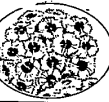

Choirs will perform through Christmas Day both in the museum and the village.

At the museum Charles Dickens' tale of the "Christmas Carol" is presented at 2 p.m., Dec. 9, 16, 26-31. The film "Charlotte's Web" will be shown Dec. 26-31, 6:30 p.m.

Visitors have often told me they had no idea we had such a treat in the area as the Ford Museum and Greenfield Village. They promised to return with their families.

These events are only the tip of the iceberg in the metropolitan area and each museum has an expression of the holidays.
