

Another different role for Scott in 'Hardcore'

The name of the actor is George C. Scott, one of the most versatile male stars in Hollywood today.

Scott also has ties to the Birmingham-Bloomfield area, for he has worked as a director at the old Will-O-Way Playhouse, now Will-O-Way Apprentice Theatre in Bloomfield Township.

These photos show Scott as he appeared in seven films. He received an Academy Award for one of these performances and was nominated for an Oscar in three other of the films in which he starred.

Scott has now been cast in an unusual role in "Hardcore," playing a deeply religious midwest businessman who infiltrates the pornography underworld to search for his missing teenage daughter.

The film, written and directed by Paul ("Taxi Driver") Schrader, is a major Columbia Pictures release.
