Southfield resident is Hilberry member

Joyce Ramsay of Southfield has recently begun her second year as a member of Wayne State University's Graduate Repertory Company at the Hilberry Theatre in Detroit.

A program of advanced training, the reportory theatre offers individuals the opporutality to participate actively in a 30-week season while simultaneously working toward a graduate degree in theater.

This year's 46 member company is composed of 23 actors, 17 technicians and six administrative assistants, representing 15 states and Canada.

A Detroit native, Ms. Ramsay has extensive credits in motion pictures, television, acting, directing and writing.

Last year she appeared at the Hilberry as Mrs. Clandon in "You Never Can Tell" and as Fiona in "How the Other Half Loves." This season shemay be seen as Lady Capulet in "Romeo and Juliet," Eliza Gant in "Look Homeward, Angel," Mrs. Dangle in "The Critic" and Ursula in

"Much Ado About Nothing."

The Hilberry Theatre officially celebrated the opening of its 16th season on Nov. 10.

This year the theater will play host to an international symposium to lay the groundwork for the proposed construction of the world's first historically accurate, full-sized replica of Shakespeare's Globe Theatre.

The conference will bring together eminent Shakespeare scholars from all over the world to discuss this building project which WSU hopes to

Trivia answers given

In the Jan. 4 Farmingin the Jan. 4 Farming-ton Observer, readers were asked to take a backward glance at last year's trivia. For those who sharpened their pen-cils and quizzed their way through the last year, the through the last year, the answers are presented. Questions 1, 2, 3 were correctly answered by B. For question 4, the answer was C; 5-A; 6-C; 7-C; 8-A; 9-B; 10-C; 11-C; 12-A; 13-B.

If you answered all 13 correctly, you definitely have an eye on your city or else you have a better collection of back issues

If you answered 12-9 questions correctly, we don't credit you with a super collection of back issues, but we do credit you with a great memory.
