Training mums on a wire

Many opportunities are springing up for dedicated gardeners who wish to attend classes and bring their knowledge up to date.

On Feb. 13, Michigan State University and the Professional Grounds Managers Society, are presenting a seminar, "Landscape Concepts For Simplified Maintenance." The meeting will be held at Bostford Inn. The faculty of Michigan State is well represented on the program. John Brugeman of Ford Motor Company will share his grounds experience. Gary Robitette will come from Reston, Va., to pass on landscape architecture expertise. He is well recognized for community landscaping.

Therefore this exposure will appeal to those on club committees, those who want to upgrade commercial sites such as shopping centers and office buildings, as well as those sitting on civic boards. Do inform your colleagues who could benefit from attending.

There are 150 new varieties of vegetables and flowers hitting the market this year. As an illustration there is a white celeriac with a green border on the leaf. The new geraniums are heavy feeders, so remember one tablespoon of household ammonia in a quart of water provides an excellent shot of nitrogen. Encounter red is an outstanding red geranium.

The triplid marigolds with three times the number of chromosomes as the monoplid geraniums will flower all through the hot summer months. The Salmon Glow petunia has ruffled petals which should make it a winner.

In the past we have always thought that impatiens should have at least one half day of shade. Now the new varieties are touted as being excellent for full sun.

Here is an idea I hope some of you will try. It isn't new, it has been practiced by Oriental gardeners for centuries. The object is to train mums on a wire.

Maybe you already have beautiful specimens, it is so easy to divide them. If not, buy a new mum plant and place five cuttings in a six inch pot, allowing a margin above the soil line of about three-quarters of an inch. Pinch the top out with your fingers upon planting—about one inch. Insert three wires to the bottom of the pot, only allowing them to extend on one side, sort of close together. Bend them at the top of the container wire and could be two-and-a-half inches long. Attach the growth ends to the wire.

Your mum plant grown in the Oriental manner will want only a small portion of the day in the shade, if at all. Pinch out the top every two weeks until the last week in July when it will be ready to set buds for an early fall flowering. Don't forget to feed.

We have a suggestion which comes from Green Scene, publication of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society. When you want to de-bug your house plants, water your plant, drain and place in a clear plastic bag with a piece of Vapona pest strip. Close the bag with a twist, set out of direct sun for 48 hours.

Remove from the bag, rinse off the dead insects. Don't you breathe the fumes. The strip can be wrapped in foil and used over and over again. Repeat the stunt again if eggs have hatched. This treatment is good for scale, white fly and aphids. Don't use colored bags and have a stick to lift the plastic off the plant.

Dionne Warwick thought Red Cross was only about hurricanes.

"True, I always thought of Red Cross as a kind of rescue force in times of disaster and little more."

"Then I learned that in towns and cities across America, Red Cross gives the kind of help to individuals that you rarely hear about, because it doesn't make headlines in the newspaper."

"Red Cross, for instance, helps elderly people get to doctors' appointments... and even to the store. They help veterans get back on the track. They teach kids to swim... and how to save lives."

"I found out that if you added up all the different humanitarian jobs Red Cross does in different towns, the number comes to over 100!"

"That's why I'm helping to keep Red Cross ready. And why I hope you do, too."
