Modern, audacious and classic best describe the new Chanel design approach for the modern woman. The Chanel collection for fall-winter holds some modern surprises for devotees of "La Grande Mademoiselle" of fashion.

The House of Chanel's ready-to-wear designer Philippe Guiborge recently said, "Chanel is renowned for her style. When a woman walks by and she's dressed in a Chanel suit, people immediately know what she's wearing." However, he went a bit further than the classic Chanel this season.

Guiborge has added a modern flavor, little impertinences to create a thoroughly updated Chanel. The result is a rich, many-faceted collection composed of Irish tweeds, rippling silks, velvets, and hand-made silks. Color is strong in black with bright flashes. Bronze, lame, and gold predominate. Feathers, sequins, Baroque jewelry and Cossack-inspired hats make for fanciful impressions.

And there are many surprises, including plunging necklines and shaped shoulders as well as taffeta coats over little sailor suits and strapless dresses complemented by a variety of jackets.

The Chanel beauty is in for some surprises, too, as cosmetic colors deepen, combining the look of luxury with the classic Chanel and adding a dash of surprise of their own.

Eyes are shadowed in smoldering grey fired with a golden glint mauve. Lips are colored in midnight rose with hints of plum and then layered over with a black ruby lip gloss. The Chanel cheek takes on a new dimension when the classic rose pink is used to highlight and terra cotta blends in to shadow.

Nail enamel is clearly audacious in an almost black red or a dark garnet.
