Linda Dresner's approach to dressing results in a thoroughly modern look.

"I am interested in having my customers look pretty in my clothes. Admittedly, they are not for everybody," she said. "I try to select the pretty things they can add to an existing wardrobe to fit their lifestyles — particularly very special evening clothes."

Although we are returning to a tailored, gabardine look in suits, said Ms. Dresner, "the look is not for everybody. When you put a very soft woman in a very tailored look, she is lost."

"I am not a follower," stated Ms. Dresner. "There is no sense in being a slave to fashion reports. I am interested in having a woman look pretty in my clothes. I try to find accessories and clothes that will pep-up a woman's closet."

On right, the new luxe look for evening, a one-of-a-kind knit sweater of metallized silk banded in maribou, with Mario Valentino's iridescent leather pant. Below: Pinky & Diane's seventh-eighths coat for Private Label. The coat looks just as well over the pant as it does with Pinky & Diane's silk shirt and grey wool gabardine skirt.
