

Moral perspectives

Peace is less risky than war

I often ask people what they think is the most important moral issue which our religion should address. A woman more than 70 years of age answered this question by pointing to the issue of world peace.

She then went on to say that whenever this topic comes up among her contemporaries the response they give is that we cannot risk peace because we cannot trust the Russians. She then said that she has no way to answer this reaction.

My belief is that we can afford to risk peace just in the same manner in which we risk war in pursuing the current arms race and arms sales to other nations.

MILITARY establishments across the world have a momentum of their own. Political change and response to threat take on an increasingly military character. As the weapons race continues it becomes more and more possible that our country, not to speak of others, will be drawn into war.

A recent article suggests that the expulsion of the boat people from Vietnam is a political move designed to consolidate internal conformity and to destabilize Southeast Asia.

If the Russians want ratification of Salt II, why could we not begin to press for that great power to help stabilize situations such as this crisis being caused by Vietnam?

MY POINT IS that there must be ways in which we can take risks in peacemaking that are no greater in the long run than if we were to rely upon military power.

Our thought patterns need to change if we are to entertain this belief that peacemaking can be less risky than armament.

We have a department of defense. We fail to understand that there is no defense possible against the weapons we now have. Robert McNamara tells us that military power will no longer offer us security. How can we begin to change our thought patterns to understand this?

Choose with care those back-to-school clothes

Getting youngsters back in school this year will mean an increased investment in clothing.

With clothing prices inflated along with everything else, parents will need to make purchases carefully to insure that garments are durable, safe, comfortable and well-liked by their wearers, advised Elaine Glasser, Oakland County Extension Home Economist.

Before you shop, look in your children's closets and take inventory. Have them try on last year's garments. Separate articles into three piles: those that can be worn again as is, those which need updating or repair, and those which do not fit the child, but may be worn by a younger child in the family after recycling. This will help you determine the essential items you need to add to the child's wardrobe.

Parents should consider shopping for only the few essentially needed garments in the fall, rather than a wide range of clothes the child may outgrow or dislike by winter. Keeping children's wardrobes small also means clothes will be worn more often; thus clothing may wear out before it is outgrown.

IN PLANNING to buy clothing for children, remember that there is no set number of pieces of clothing a child has to have. It is only important that children have enough clothing to meet a variety of everyday needs. As you plan, consider your child's special activities, the area where you live, what their friends wear, the size of your family, and how much you can afford to spend on clothing for each child.

It is also important to remember individual differences before you decide to buy. Growth rates, weight changes, shoe-size changes, and the rate of "wear-out" differ for each child, and will have an effect on the amount and kind of clothing he or she needs.

Shopping together is a chance to teach your children how to choose clothing that meets their needs. Color, texture and style of clothing is very important.

Try to guide children toward solidly constructed garments. Mix-and-match separates that can be worn in several different combinations will stretch a wardrobe. Tightly woven or knit garments are most durable and will stand up longer under the rough and tumble play children enjoy. Remember, too, that most school-age children are very conscious of peer acceptance and will want to buy clothing that "everybody else has."

READ LABELS on garments before you buy to make sure they are easy to care for. Clothing made from man-made fibers is usually easier to care for than that made from natural fibers. Take care of small repairs like loose buttons and small rips before the garment is beyond repair. Careful care of clothing by both you and your children helps give it a longer life.

Though it is difficult to judge your children's growth spurts, you can anticipate them by choosing skirts, dresses and pants with wide hems that can be let down as they grow taller.

Allowing room for growth does not mean purchasing clothes that are too big, though. Buy clothes that allow for movement, but are not so big or long as to get in the way of activity. Sleeves should not be too tight, armbands should be set about one inch below the arm pit, and pants need to be roomy in the crotch and across the seat. Shirts and blouses should be long enough to stay tucked into pants and skirts.

Programs scheduled for widowed, divorced

SPACE, a community service for the widowed, divorced and their families, launched the season with a schedule of activities for both men and women.

A four-part grief management series for the widowed will begin on Tuesday, Sept. 4.

Sister Margaret Basso, president of the Coordinating Council for Widowed Services, Southeast Michigan, Inc., will explore the grieving process and discuss one's transition into a new life-style. She will focus her talks upon both personal and family adjustment of the death of a spouse. Subsequent sessions will take place on Sept. 11, 18, and 25.

SPACE is sponsored by the Greater Detroit Section, National Council of Jewish Women. Meetings take place at 8 p.m. at the offices of the NCJW, 16400 W. 12 Mile Rd., Suite 106, Southfield.

New support groups series for the widowed and for the divorced will be offered on Monday evenings, Sept. 10, 17, and 24.

A separate three-week series for each group meets for two hours each evening and is led by a trained facilitator. Programs will start the second week of September.

Persons interested in participating in either the grief management series for the widowed or a support group series for the widowed or divorced should pre-register by calling Phyllis Chassin, weekdays between 9 a.m. and 1 p.m. at 557-9904. There is a $5 charge for each series.

SPACE also holds a weekly drop-in discussion for the widowed, divorced and separated at 8 p.m. each Wednesday at the NCJW office. Meetings are guided by trained facilitators. There is a $1 charge.
