

Would-be actress has traits to make the grade

Dear Mrs. Green,
Soon I will be starting my first year of college as a theater major in New York City. I have always loved the arts and hope to become an actress. Can you see by my handwriting that I am an ambitious and creative person?
S.D., W. Bloomfield

graphology
Lorene Green

Dear S.D.,
Good luck in college and I feel certain you will do well in your chosen major, based on this sample of handwriting.
In graphology, studying a handwriting specimen is analyzing, keeping in mind how the writer has changed from copy book style. Your handwriting has made many changes and several are very creative. This suggests among other things your creativity and your independent nature. Placement, printed capitals, personal pronoun I all boldly proclaim your aesthetic tastes and love of all things beautiful. Adding to this is your sensitive nature. You are afforded pleasure from the stimulation of the senses.
As for your other question, ambition is seen in those t crossings that are at the top of the stems and slanted upward. This is further confirmed in the upslanted lines of writing which always suggest positive thinking and ambition.

Outwardly you are very poised. You are extremely objective, and always able to analyze how a situation will affect you before you become involved. You are not ruled by emotions, but by your head.
You do not develop close relationships with many people. And the hackneyed phrase, "Charity begins at home" is quite meaningful for you (slant, spacing and lack of word endings) Your writing suggests that you might like to be more extroverted than you are.

Although you are eagerly anticipating your new experiences of college life in New York City, the shape of your letter I tells me you are somewhat apprehensive about it also. With your strong assets of self-reliance and independence you should be able to handle your forthcoming challenges very well.

If you have a question about your personality, write to Lorene C. Green, a certified graphologist, in care of this paper. Please use a full sheet of white paper and write in the first person singular. Age and handedness are also helpful. Time allows Mrs. Green to answer your letters only through the column.

Women's art works in show

Women from every corner of Oakland County will display their artwork during the Fall Festival of Women's Works at Springfield Oaks Youth Activities Center in Davisburg 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday and Sunday, Oct. 13 and 14.
Diverse artforms, ranging from modern photography, woodcarving and sculpture relief to chocolate candies and porcelain will be shown, demonstrated and sold in Springfield Oaks' colorful, rural setting. There is no admission charge.
"Along with traditional women's arts, like quilting and weaving, many less traditional women's artforms such as woodcarving and photography will be featured," said the festival's coordinator, Anne Clinton-Circoco.

"There will be a lot of handmade and ornamental items for the holidays too," Clinton-Circoco adds.
The festival also features a host of children's arts activities, including a mime presentation.
"It will be a day of fun," said Ms. Clinton-Circoco. "There will be free cider and donuts. Families can bring picnic lunches if they like, play golf at the Springfield Oaks County course
