I have a hunk of dental cement on one of my farthest back lower molars these days. I far prefer it to the sharp shell of tooth that was with me for a couple of weeks after a hard bit of cereal knocked out a big filling.

The long sojourn of the sharp tooth was strictly my responsibility, not my dentist's. He fitted me into his schedule about as soon as I got around to calling.

But the hunk of cement is his, and I have a feeling it's a responsibility not too many in his profession would have accepted.

There was darn little left in the way of either tooth or feeling when he probed around the place where the filling had been, but he announced he'd try to save the tooth anyway.

And I mention all this because this particular dentist has been making such announcements to me about as far back as I, at least, can remember.

I must be the longest-term patient on his carefully-documented ledgers. He was a very recent graduate of dental school and I was a pretty small child when he and some friends happened into the small restaurant my aunt and my mother were operating absolutely congo ago.

My parents decided to turn over to him the care of their children's teeth, and they could not have made a better decision.

Since then he has been friend as well as dental expert for more years than either of us is likely to count.

This man undoubtedly was one of the first practitioners of holistic dentistry. He knew very well I wasn't going to take a lot of tooth pain, and he always cooperated with the novocaine.

I remember well when he was a new father and I was an enthusiastic Camp Fire Girl and he asked me why I thought his tiny daughter would do well in that organization.

I've always appreciated his concern, but especially I've appreciated the skill that has kept a not particularly good set of chompers functioning.

I can't imagine how they ever will get along without him if he ever decides to hang up the drill.

I'm sure he'll wait, though, until he takes care of this hunk of cement.

Golda Meir fund for youth begins for Pioneer Women

Detroit Pioneer Women's drive to give a "Quarter Million Dollar Living Gift" to the Golda Meir Child Development Fund for children began with six area subscribers.

The first subscribers are Sarah and Morris Friedman, Frieda Leemon, Ruth Miller, Ada Mondry and Blanche and Jack Rose.

The gift will be presented during the group's national convention in Jerusalem next month.

"Golda Meir's love for children was boundless," said Mrs. Miller in explaining the $250,000 project. "She saw in them the future of the Jewish people and the Jewish state."

This living memorial can help achieve her dream and advance the principles enshrined in the United Nations declaration of the rights of the child."

The main objectives of the development fund is to train professionals in early childhood education; upgrade facilities and staff in disadvantaged neighborhoods; and provide facilities for Iranian children and those youngsters resettled in the Negev because of border changes brought about by the peace agreement.

FIVE HUNDRED Pioneer Women day care centers in Israel run by trained nursery school teachers conduct a pre-school program for 20,000 children, and three day and night homes prove a warm and loving atmosphere for the penniless child.

The group supports a broad network of educational, vocational and social services in Israel.

In the U.S. it participates in all programs for the advancement of human rights.

Pioneer Women Greater Detroit Council is based in the Labor Zionist Institute, 28555 Middlebelt Rd., Farmington Hills.

Mrs. Leemon, a Farmington Hills resident, is president of the National Pioneer Women Council.

Mrs. Miller, a Birmingham resident, is president of the Detroit Council.

FRIEDA S. LEEMON

Mrs. Leemon will be among the leaders who will address the delegates at the group's 26th national biennial convention in Jerusalem.

Communication problems straightened out here

The various methods in which individuals communicate, some subtle and some that causes trouble, will be spelled out in the library's Young Adult Department next open program, called "Doubletalk and Body Language."

The program begins at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, Oct. 17, in the Farmington Community Library on Liberty.

"You'll laugh as well as learn," said Barbara Walker, speaking for the department. "Students and adults are invited."

First half of the program is a film, called "Doubletalk" which illustrates how people sometimes do not say what they mean.

The second half of the program is turned over to Richard Thompson, provost of Oakland Community College's Orchard Ridge Campus, who will talk on both verbal and nonverbal communication.

There is no charge, and pre-registration is not required.
