

Double slaying charged*Murder suspect slated for trial

Jury members were selected this week in the case against Dorchester Harris, charged with first degree murder in the March 13 deaths of a West Bloomfield couple.

Harris, 49, of Detroit, is charged with the stabbing deaths of Donald and Mary Louise Freedman, who lived on Horseshoe Drive.

No plea has been entered in behalf of Harris by his attorney Thomas Keenen. The case is being heard by Oakland County Circuit Court Judge William Bear. Frank Mandelbaum is the Assistant Oakland County Attorney prosecuting the case.

The Freedmans were found bound and stabbed in the living room of their two-story home by Mrs. Freedman's four-year-old son. He ran to the house of a neighbor for help.

Harris was extradited from Toledo, Ohio, where he was arrested for violating a city ordinance two days after the slayings. In a routine check of his car, police discovered a number of items taken from the Freedman home, including credit cards and identification.

Harris has been held without bond since May in the Oakland County Jail awaiting trial.
