A 4 a.m. visit but who's the ghost?

Witch Watch

by GUNDELLA

The following is a letter I received from a reader last June. I have been saving it to share with you at Halloween.

One night, about a year ago, something woke me from a sound sleep. The illuminated dial of my alarm clock showed it to be exactly 4 a.m.

I lay there wondering what had wakened me. My husband lay beside me, sound asleep. There was no sound other than his deep, regular breathing. I soon drifted back to sleep, regular breathing, I soon drifted hack to sleep, regular breathing, I soon drifted hack to sleep, the state of a pattern, and for the next several weeks. I awoke even started a pattern, and for the next several weeks, I awoke even state a few time the state of the word of the state of the sta

"IT WAS IN the middle of winter and, as usual, I woke up exactly at 4. But something was different. I felt compelled to get up out of bed.

"Quietly, so as not to disturb my husband, I walked across the room and looked out of the window. It was snowing, big, fluffy flakes filled the air. The ground was completely covered with snow, and there was not a track of any kind to be seen.

decided to go into the kitchen and fix myself a cup of hot choco-late.

"I walked into the kitchen and turned on the light. The room was entirely different. There was a hand pump in the sink. A big black wood stove took up one whole side of the room. On the floor was a linoleum carpet, and the bare wooden floor boards showed around the edges. A wooden ice box stood in the corner.

"THERE WAS AN oiled cloth covering on the round, wooden table, and seated around it, on straight-backed wooden chair, were three people I had never seen in my life.

"They were engaged in conversation, and appeared not to notice me. I fell like I was an intruder (a ghost?) in their home, rather than the other way around.

"I rushed back to my room, and woke my husband. I asked him to accompany me to the kitchen, but when we got there, nothing was amiss.

"My gleamining stove, dishwasher and refigerator were all in their proper places on my beatfully carpeted floor. Three was no one in the room but my husband and I.

"I was fully awake when this happend. I did not dream it. After that night, I have never again awakened automatically at 4 a.m." Mary Sue L., Canton Twp.

"I felt strongly disturbed, and instead of going back to bed, I decided to go into the kitchen and fix myself a cup of hot choco-
