MARSHALL F. NORTH is returning to Plymouth after an absence of six years. North, who lived in Plymouth while working as personnel director of Chevrolet's Livonia Spring and Stamping plant, was transferred in 1962 to serve in a similar capacity at Chevrolet's Detroit Gear and Axle and Forge plants, and Saginaw Foundries. North returns to his previous position and will live at 1068 Dewey Street, Plymouth.

New Siding Fits Every House Style

Whether you're building or remodeling, your choice of exterior siding will be essential to the beauty and durability of your house exterior. You'll want a siding that looks good, lasts a long time, requires little or no maintenance, and blends with the house design.

WITH MODERN, scientifically-improved building products, these assets are now available to homeowners. A relatively new siding that's growing in popularity with builders and homeowners is hardboard panel and lap siding. An "engineered" wood product, hardboard siding won't split, crack or splinter, and can take hard years-round abuse. It's available pre-primed for easy painting, or prefinished.

THESE QUALITIES of durability, weather-resistance and low-maintenance make hardboard siding a natural for homeowners who don't want to spend their leisure time in frequent painting and repairs.

But, what's equally responsible for the popularity of this new siding is its availability in a variety of attractive styles that suit any house design from colonial to contemporary. Some examples are: board siding for homes with a classic and batten hardboard siding for Early American homes; rough-sawn panels for rustic-looking ranch houses; grooved vertical design, and horizontal wood-grained lap siding for contemporary house styles.

Drying Flowers Colorful

Your favorite garden flowers can be dried so you can enjoy their color and charm all winter. It is not at all difficult to do, and the dried flowers make elegant arrangements for an entrance hall, a living room coffee table or other spot that calls for an unusual decorative accent.

The simplest method is to pick the flowers and tie the stems in loose bunches and hang them head down in a dry place, Larkspur, blue salvia, statice, strawflowers, celosia, and goldcrest are among those that dry this way.

Better color and form are retained if the flowers are treated with a special drying substance such as silica crystals or a mixture of one part borax to four parts cornmeal.

The cornmeal can be purchased in a grocery store and the borax in a drugstore. Silica crystals are sold under a variety of brand names and can be obtained from a druggist or at a garden center.

ROSES, DELPHINIUM, sinningias, delias, marigolds, and most other flowers can be dried by this method. The flowers, picked in mid-afternoon when they are at their driest, are placed in a long shallow box on a thin layer of the drying material.

Carefully sift the mixture around each flower petal until the flower and stem are covered. Then cover the box. Drying time varies with the thickness of the flowers and the amount of moisture in them. Begin checking after a few days and remove when the petals are crisp. Do not leave in the drying substance longer than necessary as the colors will fade.

A variation of this method is to dry only the flower heads, then hook a thin florist wire through each blossom as a stem when they are being arranged. Also, grasses, as well as other plants with flexible stems, can be dried in a gracefully curved pose if they are placed on a 1/2" or 3/4" stem dropper over the edge.

WHEN MAKING dried arrangements try to include some spike flowers as well as round forms. More important than the form is the arrangement. The dried flowers can be arranged in a metal, ceramic, wood or other opaque container or partly filled with clay or sand to hold the stems in position.

Changing little arrangements can be made in a covered glass jar.

ed, they can be dried on the plant, even in the arrangement.
