

Pioneer Women honor Stern

Isaac Stern

Violinist Isaac Stern has been chosen to receive Pioneer Women's 1979 Golda Meir Human Relations Award.

The virtuoso, currently on tour with the Israel Philharmonic Orchestra, was designated the American who has made a significant and major contribution to United States-Israeli relations. The biennial award, American Pioneer Women's highest accolade, bears the name of the organization's early leader.

"Stern has provided an important and unique element in Israel's musical vitality," said Dorothy Margolis, awards chairman.

The Israel Music Center which he established at Mishkenot Sha'ananim, has had an enormous impact on young musicians, helping to nurture and develop their talents. His warmth and encouragement have promoted good will and understanding between artists in the two countries, and through their music, between our peoples," she added.

Stern is the second recipient of this award, named for the late Golda Meir with her consent. The first, in 1977, was the late Senator Hubert H. Humphrey.

Pioneer Women, in cooperation with its sister organization Na'amat, supports a broad network of vital social services in Israel, including day care and community centers, vocational training programs, agricultural boarding high schools and clubs for Arab and Druze women.

It is the largest women's Zionist organization in the world, with 800,000 members in twelve western countries and Israel.

In the United States Pioneer Women encourages participation in civic and community affairs and actively supports all legislation for the furthering of human rights.

Telephone reassurance seeks worker

RSVP, Retired Senior Volunteer Program of Catholic Social Services, has just received a grant of $41,288 from Detroit-Wayne County Area agency on Aging to provide such Telephone Reassurance.

The group is recruiting 500 additional volunteers to service Telephone Reassurance clients. Persons 60 years old or older should contact RSVP at 883-2100, ext. 358. This type of service has been credited with saving many lives by dispatching medical help in time.

Volunteers will make the calls from agencies which have telephones available for this purpose.

A specialized training program for volunteers will begin in November so that volunteers are ready to contact some 2,500 elderly by January.

Telephone Reassurance volunteers will be given 20 hours of technical and theoretical training in counseling techniques to help cope with loneliness, family problems, fixed income consumer counseling, energy relief counseling, crisis intervention and identifying resources for information and referral.

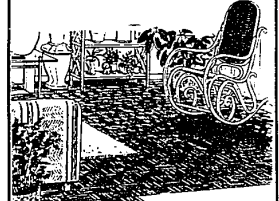

Each RSVP volunteer is expected to work four hours a week. Upon completion of the training RSVP volunteers who successfully complete the course will receive a certificate of achievement and one institutional credit in Community Services through Wayne County College.
