provide for energy conservation and practical use of interior space."

"The entire parameter of the building has equal viewing for all tenants," DeRoster said. "There is glass at the corners."

"It really is a human consideration. People enjoy looking out and seeing the change of seasons," he said. "The most interesting feature is the elevator core with its glass wall."

"We used the stream and woods for the concept which is a core with a view. Anywhere from the (elevator) core you're looking at the woods and the stream going by."
