Montebello

It's on 100 square miles of wilderness once known as a seignury, land given to a Canadian by the Bourbon kings of France centuries ago. It was once a very private club called the Seignury Club, where diplomats had to show their membership cards at the gate.

Now it is a public hotel with an unique combination of elegance and casual fun for newlyweds.

The Chateau Montebello is situated between the cities of Ottawa, Ontario and Montreal, Quebec on the northern side of the Ottawa River in Canada.

It has a six-story fireplace dominating a huge lobby, and three wings of rooms on the first and second floors. The huge log cabin was designed as a summer cottage for the very rich, and the feeling of luxury in the wilderness persists.

Sports include golf, skeet and trap shooting, riding, swimming, tennis, archery, boating, curling, hunting and fishing in remote cabins, and winter activities such as cross-country skiing.

An annual cross-country marathon, which is held late every February on a track that runs the 100 miles from Ottawa to Montreal, designates the Chateau Montebello as its half-way point.

After casual sports and woods activity during the daytime there is gourmet dining in the evening. There's an early and a late dinner sitting, and a black-tie maitre d' to give it a little class. The food is excellent.

A variety of city activities are, of course, available in both Ottawa and Montreal, which can be reached by either road or train.

For information contact Canadian Pacific Hotels toll-free at 1-800-828-7447, or write to the Chateau Montebello, Montebello, Quebec.
