

Farmington Hills man shows the way

Learn the arts and rigors of stalking salmon

By LEM MESEHE
Outdoors writer

Stream fishing for steelhead trout and salmon may be one of the most rigorous of all outdoor sports. It's also an art.

A clinic is being offered from noon to 6 p.m. Sunday, March 2 in Westland's Melvin G. Bailey Recreation Center on Ford Road east of Newburgh, directly behind city hall. It's free and open to the public.

Co-sponsors are the Westland Parks and Recreation Department and a year-old group called the Metro-West chapter of the Michigan Steelhead and Salmon Fisherman's Association.

The clinic will cover all method of stream fishing for steelhead trout and salmon," said President Arthur H. Dittmar Jr., a Farmington Hills resident who teaches at Garden City West High School.

He gave examples: "Stream equipment, rods and reels, drift baits, spinner making, trolling methods, best lures and attractors, downriggers, electronic equipment, rod building, reel maintenance, fish preparation, fly tying and fish filleting."

The U.S. Coast Guard will show a film on boating safety and have information on boat safety equipment.

THE METRO-WEST chapter of the Michigan Steelhead and Salmon Fisherman's Association was formed only last April, Art Dittmar said. "We have 117 members, and we may reach 200 in no time," he added. "We have boat outings, stream tournaments and contests against other chapters. Our membership comes mainly from the suburbs west of Telegraph Road.

Our regular meetings are 7:30 p.m. the first Tuesday of each month in the Holiday Inn on Plymouth Road west of Middlebelt in Livonia. Sure, prospective members are welcome. The chapter has just voted to affiliate with Michigan United Conservation Clubs.

MICHIGAN'S new state transportation map is in the presses with the billing that it's "the most complete transportation map the state has ever produced." So says Hannes Meyers Jr.,

Northern names honor students

Those from Farmington are: Kristin Hauser, 22175 Green Hill, and Catherine Shaefer, 32307 Heathstone.

Those from Farmington Hills are: James Cotter, 35820 Thirteen Mile, Erica Rambus, 29430 Lochmoor; John Cotter, 35920 Thirteen Mile, Charles Paulson, 29728 Fox Grove; Jane Scharfenberg, 35949 Quakerstown; Eric Shugerman, 32521 Olde Franklin; and Mary Tompkins, 33789 Hunters Pte.

chairman of the State Transportation Commission.

I find the same old flaw: State parks are shown, but national forests are omitted. Once again, the outdoorsman will need two maps to find his way around — the state's and the National Forest Service's.

The state's excuse is that the map would be too cluttered if national forests were included.

It isn't so. As late as 1962, national forests were shown on the old State Highway Department's map.

Two years ago, the map's photos emphasized southeastern Michigan — Ren Cen, Greenfield Village and the like.

This year the upper peninsula gets its dues. There are photos of Lake of the Clouds, The Bridge, Tahquamenon Falls, Pictured Rocks and the So-canal. "Down below" is represented by Holland's tulips and windmill, Ren Cen and Greenfield Village.

A new feature is a map of downtown Detroit. That's an improvement.

And for the first time, there is a special map showing intercity bus and rail passenger routes and locations of airports with commercial service.

TAS Graphics, Detroit firm that was low bidder, printed three million for 9.5 cents apiece.
