High-rise project stirs controversy

By STEVE BARNABY
Farmington editor
City of Farmington residents in five subdivisions approve of senior citizen brousing, but they don't want a six-story structure planned for that purpose in their backyards.
That's the word from Vincent BrucHeights subdivision president, who says residents will pack city council chambers to object to the project.
Complicating a solution to their objections is the fact that the proposed senior citizen and low income housing project is to be built in neighboring

Sump-pumper denies charges of wrongdoing

The Oakland County Prosecutor's office plans to investigate a Farmington Hills well and pump repair compay after hearing charges of alleged fraud from a West Bloomfield resident fraud from a West Bloomneid resident last Thursday.

The probe is aimed at Rainbow Sump Pump Service, 21398 Jackson-ville, and its owner Robert Holt. Mike Izzo, an investigator for the prosecu-tor's office, said the economic crime an invessed and the economic crime section will study the charges.

"If they are valid, we'll take him to court,' Izro said.
The investigation stemmed from a complaint by Louis Mellerowicz, first aired on a WXVZTV, Channel 7, newscast two weeks ago.
Mellerowicz said he paid Holt $2,500 for a well pump repleaement job that blew an electrical cirucit in his home and left his family without running water for more than a month.

and letr his family without running wa-ter for more than a month.

Dennis Hord of Richway Pump and Motor in Keego Harbor, whose compa-ny has completed several jobs begun by Rainbow, said the average price for such work is $400.

"Some people will pay anything such work is $800.

"Some people will pay anything when they are out of water." Hord said. Mellerowicz said he was desperate when his well pump broke the week before Christmas. He contacted Rainbow because of a Yellow Pages ad that said it offered 24 hour service.

"HOLT DEMANDED $1,500 before he would start the job. He said a new pump, wiring and pipe were needed," Mellerowicz said.
According to Mellerowicz, Holt pumped sludge through the newly in-stalled pump which blew the electrical circuitry in his home. An electrician re-stored power two days later and charged Mellerowicz $225.

Mellerowicz said he paid Hot another 3875 for replacement of the pump. With intervention by Channel 7 reporter Jerry Stanecki, Mellerowicz was issued a new $1,740 check from Prudential. The check Holt received was voided.

"I'll have to use the check to pay another company to finish the work," Mellerowicz said. "The water is still brown — we can't drink or cook with it." it."
Holt denied Mellerowicz's charges.
"He had plenty of water when I was there." Holt said. "I don't know what to say. None of that stuff is true. I don't want to talk about it."

Subdivisions involved in the move to quash the project are Drake Heights, Chatham Hills, Woodcroft, Tall Pines and Heritage West, according to Bruckler.

"Let me make it clear. We're not against senior citizen housing," said Fruckler. We object to the hightise aspect of housing and the low income housing. They are counter to the residential area."

That area's residents first became ritial area. That area's residents first became aware of plans for the senior citizen highrise at the end of last year, but were unaware until two-weeks ago that low income housing would be included in the praject were unaware until two-weeks ago that low income housing would be included in the project. But even without the low income housing. Bruckler's subdivision group objected to the highrise senior housing last year when finding out about Farmington Hills plans to build in that area. Originally, the Farmington Hills council had contemplated building senior citizen housing on that site through a bonding proposal. But since that time, that council switched to the MSHDA alternative.

Bruckler said his group hadn't any quarrel with the senior project being built in downtown Farmington at the different plant of the said of Farmington Junior High School site, saying that area is conducive for such a plan.

On the Freedom Road site, says Fuckler, it would be simple for the Hills to spread out the senior housing on the 11 acres.

"We are going to ask the council to acre as leaders." It is un to them to deter-on the 11 acres.

"We are going to ask the council to act as leaders. It is up to them to determine what to do," says Bruckler. "They are the experts."
The contracting firm of Rosenhaus, Robinson, Cline and Slavic (RRCS) has been hired by the council to work out plans with MSHDA if the plan is appropried.

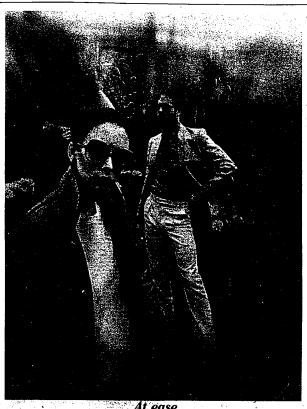

pians with MSHIJA it the pian is approved.

RRCS would manage the complex after it is built.

Farmington Hills officials hope to build a 200 unit senior citizen complex. Residents' rents would be based on 25 per cent of their incomes.

per cent of their incomes.

If the City of Farmington Council doesn't take action to quash the Hills project, Bruckler says he is unsure of what Farmington residents next move would be.

The look of spring fashion '79 is a striking contrast previous seasons. Great classics team with natural abrics to create not only a good fashion look but an avestment as well. In Thursday's edition of the Ob-erver and Eccentric newspapers, you'll see these ooks and some of the people who wear them with they are, and what works for them is what fashion is all about whether at home, abroad, on the job or at play. The ability to make fashion work for you is what creates that look of ease that so often draws envious glances. Learn how in "Spring Fashion "79" in Thursday's paper. (Staff photo by Stephen Cantrell)

Court rules contract is public

want to talk about it."

Rick Perence, a Rainbow employee, said Mellerowicz's work was completed satisfactory, which was completed satisfactory, and was a pain in the rear. He was hounding and hassling my boss until he couldn't hink straight. "Mellerowicz got on my case, too. I had to take a doy off from work. I may file a civil suit against him."

Several other Oakland County resiwon the first round in his legal battle to make the contract of Superintendent Don Sheldon a matter of public record. Oakland County Circuit Court Judge Francis O'Brien ruled last week that the Walled Lake school board "wrong-fully" refused to provide Arthur Stokus with a copy of the superintendent's con-tract in accordance with the Freedom of Information. Several other Oakland County residents said they had similar dealings with Rainbow and Holt.

Dr. and Mrs. Adam Wiodarczyk of Orchard Lake paid Holt $875 for re-placement of a pump they were later told needed only a $75 replacement nart.

John Hickox, also of Orchard Lake, said he paid Holt $118 for replacement of a $6 switch.

has 20 days in which to appeal the deci-sion.

The Walled Lake School District in-cludes the western portion of West Bloomfield and the northwest section of Farmington Hills.

Sheldon said last week that any deci-

Sheldon said last week that any deci-sion to appeal the ruiling must be made by the school board. The board was ex-pected to discuss what course of action it will take at an executive session on litigation last week. Deputy Superintendent Rolland Langerman said the contract would not be released until the board has decided if it will appeal the decision. The period during which an appeal may be filed, ends March 27.

STOKUS. A PERFORMING arts teacher at Walled Lake Western, filed the complaint in circuit court after being denied a copy of the contract by both the school board.

Stokus originally requested a copy of the contract from school administrators, but was denied access to the information on the basis that disclosure of

The administration's decision was supported by the school board at a meeting on December 11, when its members voted unanimously not to re-lease the contract.

The action was based in part on the advice of board Attorney Dennis Polard who noted that Sheldon had entered into this contract with the Walled Lake Schools in 1971 – five years before the Freedom of Information Act went into effect.

Meet Farmington staff at open house

Our sign is up and we're ready to officially greet our. Come on over Wednesday, between 1:30-4 p.m. server office. (Staff photo by Harry Mauthe)

We're settled in to our knew office and ready to greet you.

The Farmington Observer staff is having an open house at its new office, 23352 Farmington Rd., in the Downtown Farmington Center, just south of Grand River this Wednesday.

Grand River this Wednesday.

Beginning at 1:30 p.m. and lasting until 4 p.m. the open house will give to an opportunity to meet residently to meet from we've talked with on the phone, but never had the opportunity to meet face-to-face. It will be an informal occasion and everybody is invited to drop in. We'll be sharing some snacks — cheese, cold cuts, coffee, tea, soft drinks, cake, cooks and, of course, crackers, all to be consumed over the crackerbarrel with some good conversation inbetween bites.

Greeting you will be Miss Elfond, myself, Suburban Life editor Loraine McClish, Sports editor Tom Baer, pho-tographer Harry Mauthe, reporters Mary Gniewek and Louise Okrutsky and sales representative Shari Johnson.

Willoughby Wink reports that he will be at his usual hangout, the Village Inn, but will probably drop in for a few minutes.

, inside At Your Leisure Community Calendar Monday's Commentary Suburban Life

A NEW COLUMN

Sports writer Chuck "C.J." Risak has been observing the sports scene for a number of months since joining the Farmington Observer. In his first colmm, "C.J." Siede Risak takes a check view at the controversy revolving around equality in men's and women's sports. To see what he has to say, turn to Monday's Commentary on Page 9B.